Hard Study. It is a very general, mistake, that hard study kills people. It is often written in obituary notices, especially of young men who have died at College, that they were the victims of hard study—kind of martyrs o literature, and to their anxiety to enter on the more active and responsible duties of life. None but a weak minded ignoramus would write thus. Only give the brain seven hours of regular and undisturbed rest out of the twenty-four, and it will be invigorated by all the activities that can be imposed upand spend two or three hours of each day in active exercise on foot or horseback. No instance can be found in all history or biography, where, under such circumstances, uny amount of brain-work has ever been produc-tive of serious bodily inconvenience. On the contrary, brain-work is a positive pleasure to thinking men-it is literally their ment and drink, a pure delight, a labor which brings no weariness in half a century's duration; as living instances, there are Prince Metternich, almerston, and on our own side of the wa-Dr. Nott, and others, all approaching their nincties; and of the great dead, Adams and Benton, Clay and Calhoun, and Charles Caldwell, and Humboldt, all of whose minds worked with seeming undiminished vigor to the close of a long life. Away, then, with the impertinent falsity, "He died of hard study."
"He died of animal indulgence," as no brute ceast dies; and the fact of possessing a high ntellect, and made higher by cultivation, ony adds enormity to the crime of reckless in onsiderate self-destruction. A gentleman writes: "With a most vigorous constitution, tested by twenty-five years of hard toil as a student and teacher, never kept from my business a day by sickness, and never under a doctor's care an hour, I am enriest to do what I can for the physic-Trimmings, Zinc, &c., and that he is prepared to supply the wants of the community in that line at unusually low prices. He flatters himself that his facilities for manufacturing his own Wares, Stoves, &c., give him a decided advantage over any who purchase and transport at a heavy expense their entire stock.

Pennsylvania Parm School. The Farm School in Centre county is said to be in a flourishing condition. It consists of 400 acres of land, 200 of which is a dountion to the School by that large-hearted man, Gen. James Irvin, and 200 purchased of the same gentleman by the School, at $60 per acre. The land is rolling, is all underlaid with limestone, and is consequently naturally dry, and will require no artificial drainage. It is susceptible of a high state of cultivation Fity acres have been planted with fruit trees of various kinds. The nursery of fruit trees and evergreens occupies seven acres.

A large breadth has been sown with wheat which promises well. Eighty acres is plant ed in corn, and of potatoes, root crops and garden vegetables a due proportion.

The School or College building is situated on rising ground. Not quite one-third of it is completed, and it will accommodate 120 students; 104 are in attendance. When completed, it will accommodate 400. The building is limestorie, five stories high, hesides the basement, which is 14 feet high. The basement of the part yet to be built, is up. Funds are wanting to complete it .-Congress passed a bill appropriating public lands for an Agricultural School in Pennsyl. vania, the interest on the proceeds of which at $1,25 per acre, would be about $38,000 per annum, but President Buchanan, Penn-sylvania's hopeful son, vetoed it. The admission fee for students is $100 per session, or term of ten months, commencing about the middle of February, and ending in the middle of December. The students work the middle of December: The students work three hours each day on the farm, or at what-ever may be to do. Boarding, washing, light, fuel, text books, &c., furnished. Here they have an opportunity of acquiring all the useful branches of an English education, and a practical knowledge of Farming and Horticulture besides; and that, too, without the risk of losing their health. The daily labor on the farm when the content of the farm when the farm when the farm when the farm when the content of the c on the farm, wholesome diet and pure mountain air, are all conducive to health.

These items, gleaned from an authentic source, we give for the information of farmers and others in our County, who take interest in the progress of the institution.

Enlarging a Farm Without Buying Land. . If a man does not know how much land he actually owns, and gets no benefit out of that part with which he is unacquainted, and then is infurmed that he has more, and is told how to use it, why is this not equivalent to the purchase of more acres! Farmers are often heard to exclaim; "Oh that I were rich enough to buy à little more land, then I could fatten more cattle and sheep, and I could care ry more grain to market!" Now, to such men, at least to some of them, be beg leave to say, your farms are already larger than you suppose. You seem to think that your ownership extends only six inches deep into the earth; but this is a misapprehension. It is not very strange, however, since all the former owners of the soil had the same idea; and the Indians from whom your ancestors either bought or stole the land, were content with-only the surface, just enough to hunt upon or to grub a few roots out of ... But this is all a mistake, as you will see by reflection. Examine the title deeds to your land and see if there is any limit to your rights in a downward direction. You will not find any; we know you won't.

Now, therefore, do not fear to go at once and take possession of the rest of your farm. It is virgin soil, covered with only a few inches of partly worn land; and it will return you fine crops if you will only lay it to the sun and air, or mix with it the soil you have long cultivated. Perhaps it will not be wise for you to try to use it all the first year, use a little moderation in entering upon your new property, for your own sake and the farm's sake. Here is what some writer has said on the subject-not strictly correct perhaps, but highly suggestive: "At the prescut time, the average crop of wheat per acre in Great Britain, on a soil cultivated for centunies, is about double that produced on the purchase the world feel for good, the impress of their lives, instead of having their light go out in the obscurity of an early grave. heavy expense their entire stock.

It would say to those who wish to purchase the world feel for good, the impress of their stocks of any description, STOVE PIPE, or TRIVINGS, of any kind, and pay for them, he is prepared to give them great barrains; but to those wish want to purchase on a year's credit and then let it run two years more, he had rather they would call on some one else, even if they have to pay seventy-five per cent more than an anticle is worth.
