Beautiful as it is Wonderful!

T is now no longer necessary that one should leave his quiet home to wisit distant lands. Scated by his own fireside, with his family around him to share the pleasure, he can bring before him, in all the startling realities of life, the most renowned cities, pletur-ceque ruins, lakes, and leaping waterfalls, snow-clad mountains with their wild ravines, the remains of an-cient graphens, and the beauties of more modern architecture. The spreading landscape, the cattle that grazd the hillsides, fruit flowers, anything everything, are before you as the living—the real—instead of the picture.
