UP THE HILL A BERRYING. py destiny assigned to us, as tillers of the soil. Let

Early as the dew was dry, Up the hill I went a berrying;
Need I tell you—tell you why?
Farmer Davis had a daughter,
And it happened that I knew,

On each sunny morning, Jenny Up the hill went berrying too. Lonely work in picking berries,
So I joined her on the hill;
"Jenny, dear," said I, "your basket's'
Quite too large for one to fill."
So we staid—we two—to fill it,
Jenny talking—I was still—
Leading where the hill was steepest,
Picking berries up the hill.

"This is up-hill business," said abo.
"So is life," said I; "shall we
Climb it each alone, or, Jenny,
Will you come and climb with me?"
Redder than the blushing beirles
Jenny's cheek a moment grew,
While, without delay, she answered,
"I will come and climb with you."

Planting Trees, &c. AUDURN, Aug. 5, 1859.

ward through the earth, and readily pass treety down-ward through the earth, and readily pass away. A fruit tree requires a dry foot, and must have it, in order to succeed. It will present a much more sat-isfactory appearance, both as to its growth and health-fulness, while the fruit will be earlier, and of much finer size and flavor—important considerations in fruit growing.

hausted, the tree will receive a check that will take some little study to ascertain the cause. Better invite the roots to apread themselves near the surface, that they may better enjoy the beneficial influences of the air, light, and heat. Nevertheless, I am much in favor of deep culture, but think that if the whole orchard plat were subsoiled to the depth of 1½ or 2 feet it would be better. The surface and subsoil should not be mixed. The surface, if old land, and exhausted by cropping, should be made as tich, by manure or plowing in clover, and mellow, as for a good crop of wheat or corn. Then make your soil tich—subsoil—underdmin.

and seeds upon the surface, and merely covering them with a coat of leaves. Says very high and reliable autherity upon this point, "Guard against planting too thee; the trees, after the ground seales, should stand in this respect as they did in the nursery. Trees on dwarf stocks should stand so that all the stock be under the ground and no more.

5. "Also grapes—the Muscadine, the Rebecca, late grape, Isabella."

This I suppose to be a recommendation of several varieties for general cultivation among your readers. The Northern Muscadine (I know of no other Muscadine) is worthless; having been condemned as such by several Horticultural Societies. Either the Diana, Clinton, or Delaware is better. The Catawba is better, but ripens rather late for our latitude and altitude combined. The Isabella is good; so, also, the Rebecca is said to be; but it is a new grape, not yet widely disseminated nor fully tested, so that all its qualities may not be known. From one dollar to three dollars per root is charged by our most reliable nurserymen, which may be something of a bar to its coming into general cultivation at present.

A good border for the roots of a grape tree should be 8 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 2 feet deep. It should be saturally dry, or made so by drainage.—The mode of preparation is, to dig out the natural soil to the required depth, and the length and width necessary. The filling up of the border may consist of two parts of good, fresh, friable loam, one of old well-rotted manure, and one of safes, shells, broken bones, etc., all completely mixed with one another. The top of the border when finished should be at least a foot highor than the surface of the ground, so that it may still remain higher after settling. Let every one of your readers planta grape wine.

Srnawarsents.—This is a good time (August and September) to plant strawberries. A bed of strawberries planted this Autumn, will yield, next season, about half a crop, which will, with the addition of a little cream and sugar, make many a most leavu

Cherry Trees.

Lemon, Wyoming Co., Pa., Aug., 1859.

Messas. Editors:—Noticing that one of the correspondents of the "Farmers Department" of the Republican, recommends the setting out of "Cherry trees for shade along the highways." I will give you my experience, limited though it be, with regard to growing them. rowing them.
Some twelve or fourteen years ago, I set out some py destiny assigned to us, as tillers of the soil. Let our ambition be to point out the means to make two blades of grass, or two ears of corn grow where but one grew before. In tilling the earth, some people go upon the same principle that regulates their business intercourse with men—they must get the advantage, if they have to cheat and deceive these they deal with. And they think to practice the same astifice on old mother earth. You will see them on their ground, in the spring, as shy as dogs, apparently calculating that the earth had forgotten the large crops that were taken from her last year. Perhaps they will give a sprinkling of manure and throw it on so as to make the earth think there is a noble lot of it. Well, they go to work, but the earth won't be cheated. She will reward evey man according to his work, and tell the truth in autumn. You can't get the advantage of her, as you can with human costomers.

Mules vs. Horses for Steady Labor. The prominent reasons for using mules in teaming and farm labor in preference to horses are briefly exhibited in the following views: They live to a much greater age; a mule has scarcely attained his matured strength at twelve years old, an age at which horses have commenced a rapid deterioration in value and usefulness; the average life of Messas Editors: Your issue of the 28th ult. contained a communication signed "H. McKinney," in which is a paragraph containing directions for planting trees, &c., about which, by your permission, I would like to make a remark or two. The paragraph alluded to I will quote:

"To set out trees—dig 3 feet deep—3 feet across—save the soil—throw away the clay. Fill the, boie within a foot with sods, set your tree, and put back your soil. Also grapes—the Muscadine, the Rebecca, late grape, the Isabella."

For convenience, allow me to dissect it, that I may take a limb at a time. the mule is thirty years, but often at forty take a limb at a time.

1. "To set out frees—dig 3 feet deep—3 feet across—save the soil—throw away the clay."
Such a hole, cat in the clay, would be a good receptacle for the retention of water, for the solid and impervious nature of the clay would prevent its escape, except by evaporation, and as a consequence, the roots of the tree would stand in a mass of frozen mud, during winter, and in a bed of mortar, during spring and greater part of summer. Trees, if they lived at all, grown under such circumstances, would present a sickly and unthrifty appearance. Such a hole might be admissible in loose gravelly, or sandy soils, but not in clayey ones, unless underdrained, and if so, the drain tiles should be laid at least six inches below the bottom of the holes. No water, should be permitted to stand in or on the soil of an ore draft, but it should be allowed to pass freely downward through the earth, and readily pass away. I am not much in favor of digging such a hole at any rate, in the hard earth, for after two or three years, the roots will fill the hole, and then they will be cramped or confined for want of room for expansion, and as the food deposited therein will be exhausted, the tree will receive a check that will take the property of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a receive a check that will take the room of the sund to a room of the sun of these animals is a subject worthy the see rious and considerate reflection of the farmer. It is evident to my mind that mules may be bred with less care and expense than horses, and that they will command a price nearly equal to that of an ordinary horse, while the demand for them is prompt and continually
