The same writer also urges the necessity of pillar moth and apple louse; and gives as a remedy, the removing of the dead bark from the tree and washing with alkaline solutions,

It is then to be put in the press (without wetting the straw), from whence the liquor is strained through hair cloth or a sieve, into perfectly clean, sweet, sound casks." It is said that the difference between molasses and loaf sugar is not greater than is the difference of flavor between the juice squeezed suddenly from the apple and that taken from an apple previously ground, and for some time exposed to the atmosphere. "After the juice has been expressed" says Prof. Mapes, "it should be placed in barrels in a cellar where the temperature will not fall below 60° F., nor increase above 75°F. An active saccharine fermentation will commence in a few hours; this should be permitted to continue with the bung loose until the hissing sound, discernible where carbonic acid gas is escaping, shall cease. The cider may now be racked or drawn off in clean barrels, separating it from its sediment, and suffered to ferment after being bunged up" for a few days, the bungs of course being loosened as before. This fermentation will be of short duration. The cider may now be racked again, the bungs tightly closed, and kept in a cool cellar." AGRESTIC.

Digestibility of Different Kinds of Flesh. The flesh of young animals is tenderer than that of adults; and tenderness is one quality which favors digestibility. Nevertheless we shall err if, fixing our attention on this one quality, we assume that the flesh of young. an mals is always more digestible then that of adults; we shall find veal to be less so than beef. The reason given for the first of these exceptions is, that veal has less of the peculiar aroma developed in cooking: the reason given for the second, that the texture of chicken is closer than that of beef, and being closer is less readily acted on by the gastric juce. Every one knows that veal is not digestible, and is always shunned by the dyspeptic. On the other hand, in spite of chick-en being less digestible than beef, it is more suitable for a delicate stomach, and will be assimilated when beef or other meat would not remain in the stomach,—an example that shows us that even the rule of nutritive value, being determined in a great measure by digestibility, is not absolute, and which further shows how cautious we should be in relying upon general rule in cases so complex,-The sge of animals is very important. Thus the flesh of the kid is very agreeable, but as the kid approaches the adult period there is so pronounced an odor developed from the hird acid in its fat that the flesh is uncatable.

Strawberries are pest grown in needs about the four feet wide, for convenience in gathering the fruit, and giving them the best of cultivation. About three rows in a bed, and the plants one foot apart in the row, will be a good arrangement.—Gardners Monthly. Whereas the ox and cow, fattened for two years after reaching full growth, have acquired the perfection of their aroma and flavor. The difference between lamb and mutton is very marked, especially in their fat, that of mutton containing more fatty acid, and being to many stomachs intolerable.—Lewes's Physiology of Common Lafe.

BROWN BREAD. Take three quarts of corn meal, and wet it up with warm water, letting it stand twenty minutes to swell, then add one quart of rye meal, or if that is not convenient, add one pint of wheat flour and one teacupfull of molasses, and wet the whole up with milk or cold water; then bake for two hours or until it is done.

The Hog and his Food.

A correspondent of the American Stock Journal gives some hints on the management as a second article, than one on the cultivation of the hog. He thinks that the hog fattens tion of the apple; though Agricultural Chemmost rapidly in such a state of atmosphere as The Ready Pay System! istry and the rise and progress of Agriculturism most congenial to his comfort, not too hot, al Schools would properly be first in order; nor too cold. Hence, the months of Septembut on account of the space required to treat ber, October, and November are the best for understandingly I have thought it best making pork. The more agreeable the weath-to omit them from this series of papers. er, the less is the amount of food required to From the fact that the apple is mentioned supply the waste of life. It has been found in the Bible, it is supposed to be a native of Palestine, though at this day it is not grown there, but is imported from Damascus.— during Spring and Summer months, where there, but is imported from Damascus,— during Spring and Summer months, where The apple delights in limestone soil and deep they can have a plenty of water, and the slope loams, resting on north or north-eastern ex-posures, clevated table-lands, and the like. dairy. It does well on all soils free from excessive than when ted inca sweet state. The first moisture. The apple is tenacious of life—green herbage of the Spring works off the imfine specimens in this country are now bear purities of the blood, cleauses the system, renovates the constitution, and enables the I give the following suggestions regarding animal to accumulate a store of strength to the setting of trees, from the pen of H. C. Vail, late of the Westchester Farm School, N. Y. "The soil should be made rich by the clover fails is good. Some object to fatcold composts of manure, muck, salt, lime, and ashes; the holes should be large and deep, replacing none of the uncongenial sub-matured. Taking all things into considerasoil. After the tree is set at the depth it tion, it is better to feed corn before it is ripe, was in the nursery, cover the soil with loose as in that state it possesses considerable sweetness, and most varieties are in the milk by the first of September. The hogs will without danger of hardening the soil. The chew it, swallow the juce, and eject the dry distance between the trees will be from 25 fibrous matter. At this season of the year, to 40 feet, according to variety. The soil swine can be fed on many things not readily should be constantly stirred, until the trees are several years established. If well manure When such articles are used, cooking them marketable, as imperfect fruit, vegetables &c. When such articles are used, cooking them is generally economical. Pumpkins, squashes, potatoes, and apples boiled or steamed mixed with one eighth part in bulk with mil feed or meal, whey, or milk left to sour, will fatten hogs fast. In this state they will eat it with avidity, and derive more benefit from analysis of the apple, by Prof. Emmons, it than when fed in an unfermented state. As shows in 100 parts of the ash of sap-wood, 16 parts of potash, 18 parts of lime, 17 parts be used first, to prevent waste, as it is desirphosphate of lime; in 100 parts of the ash of table to turn all products of the farm to the apple bark, 4 parts potash, 51 parts lime; best account. Another quite important ad hence the plain necessity of furnishing a sup-vantage of early feeding is, the less trouble vantage of early feeding is, the less trouble in cooking the food and keeping it in proper condition to feed out. The convenience of keeping the trees free from the borer, cater feeding is promoted, as there is no expense nor trouble to guard against freezing. The more you can mix the food the better, as they will thrive faster on mixed food than whe fed separately. In feeding, no more should be given at a time than is eaten up clean, and the feeding should be regular as to time.-

The writer says that there is a great dive sity of opinion as to which is the best kind nests and destroying them with the flame of a camphene lamp, thrust among the branches by means of a long pole.

As the article in this paper a few weeks since, from the able pen of the late A. J. Dogning on the care of apples is allowed.

Dogning on the care of apples is allowed. since, from the able pen of the late A. J. Downing, on the care of apples, is allowed to be the best method for the preservation of this much esteemed fruit, I will not take the space to offer any new remarks upon the subject; but will give a few hints on the care of apples intended for cider. Contrary to the general custom, apples for cider should be carefully gathered; not roughly shaken on stones and rough ground, but carefully picked, or if shaken from the tree, coarse cloths or straw should be placed on the ground un-

The correspondent of the Journal think that a cross of the Suffolks with the Berkshires make good feeders, and the pork is ex-cellent; they will usually weight from 250 to 300 pounds at the age of eight ten or eleven months. The better way is to have the pigs double the price of any other in market.

Downing says that after the apples have been ground "the pulp should remain in a vat from 24 to 48 hours, or even longer if the weather is coal in order to the same as large in nine months as it remains to have the pigs dropped about the first of April, and feed well until December, and butcher. It is months of its life, when it could be made as large in nine months as it remains to have the pigs dropped about the first of April, and feed well until December, and butcher. It is months of its life, when it could be made as large in nine months, as it generally is at fitteen months. If pigs are well kept for three months after being dropped, they cannot be stunted after that, even if the feed is cut short It is now the opinion with our good practical farmers, that feeding apples to swine is prof itable, and that there is no crop that pays better according to its cost, being fully equal to potatoes by measure, while the expense not more than three or four cents a bushel, They are better to feed to stock hogs in a raw state than potatoes—indeed he has found but little benefit in cooking apples for awine.—
It is desirable that hogs should be provided with a dry floor for eating and sleeping only, the whole pen should be covered, to save any washing or waste of manure. One other suggestion; every farmer should see that the commonwealth of the piggery is furnished with plenty of straw, potato vines, leaves, saw-dust and the like, with an occasional load of muck, and almost any quantity of weeds, pea and buckwheat straw, all of which will be converted into the most efficient supports of vegetable life. Hogs are the best composters known, as they delight in upturning any such articles as the farmer wishes to convert into manure for the coming year. STRAWBERRIES. - August and September are favorite months to plant out strawherries with those who desire a crop of fruit the next season. In making a strawberry-bed, a warm dry spot of ground should be chosen, with, possible, a good loamy or clay subsoil.-I moist, wet situation is unfavorable. It is best to subsoil it at least two feet deep, and if the soil is poor, legit be well enriched with well-decayed stable mapure. In setting out, take care that the plants do not become dry from the time they are taken up till they are replanted, and see that they do not wither afterwards. Many persons cut off the leaves, if they are afraid of their wilting under hot suns, but a much better plan is to shade .inverted four-inch flower-pots are excellent for this purpose; they may be taken off at night. The dews will so invigorate them, that the shade will only be required for a few days. Sometimes in September they may need a good watering; but this should never be at tempted unless a thorough saturation of the whole bed is given, and in a few days after, the hoe and rake should be employed to loos-en and level the surface, which the heavy watering, in all probability, has caused to bake and become very crusty.

LIFE DROPS, THE GREAT BEMEDY FOR

Diarrhaa, Granps or Pains in the Stomach or Bonoeles, Cholera Morbus, Incipient Stages of Cholera, Cholic and Kindred Diseases.

Thill's medicine has been thoroughly tested during the last tend years, and experience has proved it to be first superior to any remedy now before the public for this chass of disease. It could not be and refinable, does not constitute the bowelabut effects a radical and immediate cure in those sweer cases that other remedies do not reach. Severe cramps and pains in the stomach or bowel discussed in twenty drops, the following from Rev. Mr. Waterhouse, is a sample of the testimony wears daily receiving:

Mourr Verson, N. Y., May 7, 1850.

I have used Trail & Stow's Life Drops in my family some six or eight years for diarrhosa, billious choile, and other stomach smal bowel difficulties, and otherfully reformed them as a safe and efficacious medicine. G. W. Warrsmorse, Baptist Minister.

Travelers should always take this remedy with them, when they leave house. They would then be able to cure their own ches and pains caused by change of diet and water, without recourse to a bivatern. projection.
