

An Act of Honor in Sierra

We find the following card and correspondence in the Sierra (California) Democrat of Sept. 17:

A CARD.—On Sunday, 4th inst., in a discussion on the case, O. B. Tyler made an assertion which I believed incorrect. I told him so. He called me a liar. I attempted to strike him but was caught by the crowd. He repeated the epithet several times. I promised to see him at another time; he remained in the crowd and would not let me touch him then; and that, as he should certainly hear from me, there was no occasion to repeat his remarks. He continued multiplying epithets upon me an hour or so after the discussion. I went to the house of Mr. Tyler to meet me on the Gymnasium, where, without arms, away from the crowd, we could settle our difficulty in a quiet way. He declined bearing the message. I told him I must then take my chance for it on the street. About half an hour later an opportunity occurred to give T. a blow for the face around could prevent. I gave him one fair in the face, with my naked hand. He went reeling into the street and I did not follow him—wishing only to requit the insult he had given me. He says I approached behind him. I refer, for a contradiction to this, to Messrs. G. Chasid, J. Buckley, Wm. Edwards, J. Bryant, and A. Kennedy. After getting his face into a pincushion, Tyler met me on the street, and drawing a pistol, bade me draw. I did so, but his arm was caught and I did not shoot.

Thursday evening, 8th, I received, through the hands of Mr. Bartlett, a note from Tyler. Friends of T. had been told, as I have been informed, but did not know at the time, that I would accept a challenge. It would seem, by the language employed in this note, that he did not mean to bring on a fight between us. The blow was ground for him to demand satisfaction. The circumstances formed no part of his claim. His grievance was the blow. In the circumstances did not justify my conduct, my part was to apologize. He must not assert a lie and ask me to endorse it by fighting upon it. He sent his note, left his friend on the street in the premises, and left town. His friend had no authority to withdraw the false statement, and Tyler, when informed of it, was not disposed to; that withdrawn, I might have accepted his challenge—a consummation he never did.

In all my part in this matter I have been guided by my friends, and by the judgment of gentlemen familiar with the duello. In considering a answer to the challenge they ruled it impossible to accept, till the false statement, which was pointed out by my answer, should be withdrawn.

I have stated precisely, and in detail, all the circumstances of this affair. It was brought before the public—let the public judge it. Tyler has sought solace for his damaged face in a newspaper paragraph, assuring, if it is thought any one would think less of me on that account, that I might be sorry. It is my duty to set my foot on the ground of my statement, as Tyler did, and to answer "the lie" with a blow. Here follows the correspondence alluded to.

DOWNTOWN, Sept. 8, '92.
W. J. FORBES, Esq.—Sir: For the blow which I received from you on Sunday evening last, when you approached me unaware and from behind my back, I demand the satisfaction due to a gentleman.
O. B. TYLER.

DOWNTOWN, Sept. 8, '92.
O. B. TYLER, Esq.—Sir: Your note of to-day is before me. In reply, I have to state that your account of the affair of Sunday evening is materially incorrect, in representing that I "approached you from behind your back." Your conduct you placed me in a position which required no more than a self-defense. I went no further—did not more than I feel that I was justified in doing. Until you shall have corrected your statement of the occurrence of Sunday evening, making it conform to the facts, I can have no further correspondence with you on the subject.
W. J. FORBES.

DOWNTOWN, Sept. 9, '92.
W. J. FORBES, Esq.—Sir: Your note of to-day is received. By referring to Mr. Tyler's note of yesterday, you will see it was intended for a peremptory challenge. You will oblige me by naming a friend to arrange the preliminaries.
Respectfully yours,
LOUIS BARTLETT.

DOWNTOWN, Sept. 9, '92.
L. BARTLETT, Esq.—Sir: Your note of to-day is at hand. I cannot conceive that it contains any explanation of the objectionable language of Mr. Tyler's original note. I shall therefore adhere strictly to the terms of my note of this morning.
Respectfully,
W. J. FORBES.

DOWNTOWN, Sept. 9, '92.
W. J. FORBES, Esq.—Sir: Your note of 10 o'clock to-day is at hand. If I understand the matter properly, Mr. Tyler sent a peremptory challenge yesterday. I wish to know, without any further delay, whether you intend to meet Mr. Tyler or not, on such terms as may be agreed upon by mutual friends.
Respectfully,
W. J. FORBES.

THE WOMEN MAY LEGALLY SUE.—An attempt has been made in South Carolina to deprive women of the natural and created right of suing in legal process, but it has ignominiously failed. Mrs. Nancy Stevenson was indicted at Anderson, S. C., as a common scold. Mr. Orr, former speaker of the National House of Representatives, appeared in her defense. He moved to quash the indictment on the plea that scolding is not an indictable offense in South Carolina. The distinguished advocate is reported to have made a very eloquent and gallant plea for his client, and he succeeded, and the court ordered the indictment quashed, and declared that portion of the constitution relating to this offense, obsolete in South Carolina. Mrs. Stevenson may now believe her vested right in suing to be as good as restored. We presume the decision of the Carolina judge will become a precedent, and that the old sovereign States of this Union will not be behind the neighboring States in regard to the rights of women. But let not the freedom degenerate into license. The decision is that the common law against common scolds is obsolete. Whether uncommon scolds are to be tolerated is a question not yet mooted, and there may be breakers ahead there.

Toads and their Skin.

Mr. Egerton writes in a short article in the Farmer about toads. It says "he rolls up his old coat in a pile and swallows it."

Now, as I have seen him take off his coat and pants, and a friend has seen the same thing in precisely the same way, it may be interesting to others to know the process. About the middle of July I found a toad on a hill of melon, and not wanting him to leave, I held around him; he appeared sluggish, and far inclined to move. Presently I observed him pressing his elbows hard against his sides and rubbing downwards. He appeared so singular that I winched to see what he was up to. After a few smart rubs his skin began to burst open straight along his back. Now, said I, old fellow you have done it; but he appeared to be unconcerned, and kept rubbing till he had worked down his skin into folds on his sides and hips; then he raised one leg with both hands he hauled off one leg of his pants the same way, anybody would, then stripped the other hind leg in the same way. He then took this cast of cuticle forward between his fore legs, into his mouth and swallowed it; then by raising and lowering his head, swallowing as his head came down, he stripped off the skin underneath until it came to his fore legs and then grasping up with his opposite hand, by considerable pulling stripped off the skin, changing hands he stripped the other and by a slight motion of the head and all the while swallowing he drew it from the throat and swallowed the whole. The operation seemed to be an agreeable one and occupied but a short time.—New England Farmer.

KEEP STOCK SWARM.—Farmers do not pay sufficient attention to the worms of their stock, but suffer them to roam about in the open air, and to the implement wheelbarrow. The amount of exercise is another most important point to attend to. The more an animal moves about the quicker will be the breathe, and the more starch, gum, sugar, and other respiratory elements it must have in its food, and if an additional quantity of these substances is not given to supply the increased demand, the fat and other parts of the body will be drawn on, and the animal will become thinner, also, as before observed, every motion of body produces a corresponding destruction of the muscles which produce that motion. It is, therefore, quite evident that the more an animal moves about the more the heat-producing and flesh-forming principle it must receive in its food. Hence we see the propriety of keeping our cattle in sheds and yards and not suffering them (particularly those we intend to fatten) to rove about, consuming more food, and wasting away more rapidly the various tissues of the body already formed, and making it more expensive and difficult to fatten them.

Gov. Balfour in his recent address before the Michigan State Agricultural Society remarked as follows: "I see no inseparable object in the way of successfully combining minor manufactures with agricultural pursuits. The rigors and length of our Winters are the chief reasons why we should produce the staples of the farm, and not winter holds in letters of credit for six months in the year, a possible alternation of employment is demanded. Innumerable advantages would flow from the adoption of such an idea throughout the Northern States, where it is indispensable to a full prosperity. The figures of a long winter should be the figures of a long summer, as with the employment for a part of the year would apply to hand culture the small savings and the new methods which ensure success in mechanics. And thus the farmer would add the thrift and enterprise that distinguish purely commercial communities to the industry and enjoyment that have marked the pursuits from the beginning of the world. To the hill and valley, glowing with the industry of the sheep, as with the seasonal beauties of the farm, that let us may be profitably employed, contaminations of idleness dispelled, and the now desolate places made musical with the hum of market towns and the sustained energy of city populations."

NEWTON'S THREE LAWS OF MOTION.—1. A body continues in the state in which it is, whether of rest or motion, until compelled by some external force to change its state. 2. Motion or change of motion, is proportional to the force impressed, and is in the direction of that force. 3. When bodies act on each other, action and reaction are equal, and in opposite directions. These are the fundamental principles of Mechanics, and they rest on three different kinds of evidence. 1. They are conformable to all experience and observation. 2. They are confirmed by various accurate experiments. 3. The conclusions deduced from them have always proved true in fact, without exception.—Practical Mechanist.

TO HAVE HENSH LAY IN WINTER.—To be sure of a good supply of eggs in winter, raise some chickens early in the spring as possible. The Pullet of these early broods will be large enough to lay late in the fall, and they are supplied with warm quarters, and besides being well fed with grain, are allowed occasionally a few scraps of meat thrown in to them, they will continue to lay all winter. Old hens, if treated thus, will often be come quite prolific. Hen roosts should be supplied with straw and pounded shells, especially in winter, when the hens cannot procure these articles elsewhere.

MILK.—Never argue about milk with man or woman, says the Hon. A. B. Dickinson, if they do not know that milk can be kept all winter in the form of butter, and that if it is dry, you all know that it will prevent the cream from rising, the milk will be more palatable and healthful, with the particles of cream mixed through it, than skim milk or that milk fresh from the cow, with the fresh taste and odor. To prepare milk in this way, take it while warm from the cow, set it in a cool place, and stir it continually until all animal heat is out, and no cream will rise after the operation. Try it, and see how much it will be improved for family use.

CATTLE YARDS SHOULD BE WELL FILTERED WITH REFUSE STRAW.—It absorbs the liquid, and prevents it from running to waste, and the quantity of the manure, and adds shelter, well-lit, well-ventilated, and a pleasant place in winter—you will be inclined to spend considerably more time there—and we all know that cattle and sheep thrive much better for being looked after.—Genevieve Farmer.

When pears are just arriving at perfection, they may be greatly improved in flavor by being placed in a warm room for a few days before they are eaten. The increased temperature promotes more readily and perfectly the transportation of the juices into the saccharine state.

In Scotland, at least, says the Encyclopedia Britannica, "often-repeated trials have shown that larger crops of wheat are obtained by broadcasting than drilling."

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

It is a fact that, at some period, every member of the human family is subject to disease or disturbance of the bodily functions; and with all of a good tonic and the exercise of plain common sense, they may be able to regulate the system as to secure permanent health. In order to accomplish this desired object, the true course to pursue is certainly that which will produce a natural state of things at the least hazard of vital strength and life. For this purpose, Dr. Hostetter has introduced to this country a preparation bearing his name, which is not a new medicine, but one that has been tried for years, giving satisfaction to all who have used it. The Bitters operate powerfully upon the stomach, bowels, and liver, restoring them to a healthy and vigorous action, and thus, by the simple process of strengthening nature, enable the system to triumph over disease, and escape the protracted course of suffering, indigestion, Nausea, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, or any Bilious Complaints, arising from a morbid condition of the stomach or bowels, producing Cholera, Dysentery, Colic, Cholera Morbus, &c. These Bitters have no equal.

Diarrhea, dysentery or flux, so generally contracted by new settlers, and caused principally by the change of water and diet, will be speedily regulated by a brief use of this preparation. Hypertrophy, a disease which is probably more prevalent in some various forms than any other, and the cause of which may always be attributed to derangements of the digestive organs, can be cured without fail by using HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, as per directions on the bottle. For this disease every physician will recommend Bitters of some kind; but why not use an article known to be infallible? All instances where there is a protracted disease and a general debility of the system in general; and among them all there is no more to be feared than a protracted disease contracted by a German, from whom little preparation emanated, based upon scientific experiments which have led to the proof of the value of this great preparation in the treatment of all such cases. FEVER AND AGUE.—This trying and protracting disease, which fixes its relentless grasp on the body of man, reducing him to a mere shadow of his former self, and driving him physically and mentally insane, can be driven from the body by the use of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Further, none of the most insupportable of diseases, even in exposed situations, if the Bitters are used as per directions, and as they neither create nausea nor offend the palate, and render unnecessary any change of diet, or interruption of ordinary pursuits, but promote sound sleep and healthy digestion, the complaint is speedily and as consistently with the production of a thorough and permanent cure.

For Persons in Advanced Years, who are suffering from an enfeebled constitution and infirmity, Hostetter's Bitters are invaluable as a restorative of strength and vigor, and need only be tried to be appreciated. And to a mother while nursing these Bitters are indispensable, especially when the mother's nourishment is inadequate to the demands of the child, consequently her strength must yield, and here it is where a good tonic, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is needed to impart temporary strength and vigor to the system. Ladies should by all means try this remedy for all cases of debility, and, before so doing, should ask their physician, when, if he is acquainted with the virtue of the Bitters, will recommend their use in all cases of weakness.
