Por the Independent Republican. "Knotty Points in Grammar" Considered "They said they were an hungry:"-"And his disciples said they were an hungered :"-When he was an hungered."

These may be considered as anomalous phrases, which, although they appear to give additional grace and dignity to expression, should not receive much favor, although not exactly faulty, because, like many other anomalies in the writings of our most fashiona-ble authors, they are a wide departure from the general usage and idiom of our language. All language is more or less elliptical—ours particularly so-which is conducive to brevity, ease, harmony, and beauty of expression-When, by the use of several simple ideas combined, another idea is clearly and unmistakably brought to view, that accompanying idea may be, and very properly is often ellipticized or dropped in the expression. To do otherwise would be to render our language redundant, clumsy, and inelegant. If then, we supply the ellipsis in the foregoing phrases, regularity will be restored, and parsing be less difficult. That "hungry" and "hungered" have reference to person is unquestionable; and therefore I see no impropriety in rendering the phrases respectively as follows: "And they said they were an hungry" company:—" And his disciples said they were an hungred" company:—" When he (David) was an hungered" person or man. In this way "an" remains an article, and "hungry" and "hungered" become adjectives and belong to and qualify their following

There are some, I suppose, who prefer to parse "an hungered" as a passive verb .-That, I think, would hardly do, because,first, we have no passive verbs or passive actions, but on the contrary, passive nouns, agents, or subjects; and secondly, because it inconsistent to join two verbs or actions of different times, depending upon different actors, and assign both to an agent which performs no part of either; a fact which must be, if verbs are passive. Every verb or action has an actor—every actor has an object for acting, and hence every action necessarily affects two cases, the acting and acted upon, expressed or implied; to deny which would be tacitly saying that rational beings and Nature's laws act without motive or de-

In the sentence, "John is loved by his father," there are two simple actions in close position, but depending upon different causes. "Is" signifies existence, having the laws of Nature for its actor; "loved" refers to and depends upon "father;" and each, not unitedly, but respectively, terminates on John, the subject, who is passive or inactive.

In the formation of all passive verbs so called, the verb to be, in all its variations, merely declares existence, the act of producing and sustaining which is not performed by the subject or nominative, but is by natural laws which produce existence, or something else, understood. The perfect participle, when joined to the verb to be, is always expressive of past time and hence, when to be is pres ent, the times of action are opposite and incongruous, and I should think inconsistent. It appears to me, then, to be the better way to parse each word separately, referring each to its proper cause of action, showing also on what subject, word, or thing each respectively terminates. The above is my method, with the rea sons, for parsing such sentences. I know of no better way—I believe it to be analogical; and I offer these remarks merely to impart or obtain light. If there is a better mode should be pleased to obtain it. 9. 1. 8.

A Miser-

Michael Baird, (or Bear, as he was sometimes called,) who lived near Little York, Pennsylvania, was a miserable miser. His father left a valuable farm of five hundred acres in the vicinity of York, with some farming and household articles. He kept a tavern for a number of years-married, and raised four children. He accumulated an immense estate which he preserved so tena-ciously that he never afforded a dollar for the education of his children. He was never known to lay out one dollar in cash, for any article he might be in want of; he would ei ther do without it, or find some person who would barter with him for something he could not conveniently sell for the money. He farmed largely, and kept a large distillery, which he supplied entirely with his own grain. He kept a team for conveyance of his whiskey and flour to Baltimore, where, when he could not sell for money at a price to suit him, he bartered for necessaries for his family and tavern. In this way he · amassed an estate worth four hundred thousand dollars. Such was his attachment to money that he was never known to credit a single dollar to any man. Upon the best mortgage or other security that could be given he would not lend a cent. He never invested one dollar in public funds, neither would be keep the notes of any bank longer than till he could get them changed, He deposited his specie in a large iron chest, until it would hold no more. He then provided a strong iron hooped barrel, which he al so filled. After his death his strong boxes yielded two hundred and thirty thousand dollars in gold and silver.

The cause of his death was as remarkable as the course of his life. A gentleman from Virginia offered him twelve dollars a bushel for one hundred and ten bushels of clover seed; but he would not sell it for less than thirteen dollars, and they did not agree.— The seed was afterwards sent to Philadelphia, where it was sold for seven dollars per bushel, and brought in the whole five hundred and fifty dollars less than the Virginian had offered for it. On receiving an account of his sale, he walked through his farm, went to his distillery, and gave directions to his people. He then went to his wagon house and hanged-himself .- Belmont. Republican.

"THE ETIQUETTE OF ADVERTISING."-A Bervant girl recently advertised in the Transcript for a situation, and the wife of one of our merchants sent to make inquries about her. The girl called on the inquirer the next morning, and apologized for so doing, stating that she was passing through the street, and thought she would call. "I sent for you," said the housekeeper, d and thought of course you would come." "No, marm," replied the girl, " when a lady advertises for a place, it is expected that the person wanting her services will call—that is the etiquette of advertising," "If you stand so much on eti-quette as that," retorted the housekeeper, I am quite certain you will not do for me. The above incident took place last week in C-street, Boston.—Boston Transcript.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

It is a fact that, at some period, every member of the human family is subject to disease if disturbance of the bodily functions; but, with the aid of a good tonic and the exercise of plain common sense, they may be able so to regulate the system as to secure permanent health. In order to accomplish this desired object, the true course to pursue is certainly that which will produce a natural state of things at the least hazard of vital strength and lifes. For this purpose, Dr. Hostetter has introduced to this country a preparation hearing his name, which is not a new medicine, but one that has been tried for years, giving satisfaction to all who have used it. The Bitters operate powerfully upon the stomach, bowels, and liver, restoring them to a healthy and vigorous action, and thus, by the simple process of strengthening nature, enable the system to triumph over, disease.

For the cure of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Nausca Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, or any Bilicus More and Stomach or Bowels, producing Gramps, Dysentery, Colic, Cholera Morbus, &c., these Distrers have no equal.

Diarrhea, dysentery or flux, so generally contraded by new settlers, and caused principally a by the change of water and diet, will be speedily

Diarrhoza, dysentery or flux, so generally contradted by new settlers, and caused principally by the change of water and dict, will be speedily regulated by a brief use of this preparation. Dyspepsia, a disease which is probably more prevalent, in all its various forms, than any other, and the cause of which may always be attributed to derangements of the digestive organs, can be cured without fail by using HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, as per directions on the bottle. For this disease every physician will recommend Bitters of some kind; then why not use an article known to be infallible! All nations have their Bitters, as a preventive of disease and strengthener of the system in general; and among them all there is ventive of disease and strengthener of the system in general; and among them all there is not to be found a more healthy people than the Germans, from whom this preparation emanated, based upon scientific experiments which have tended to prove the value of this great preparation in the scale of medical science.

ENVER AND AGUE.—This trying and provoking disease, which fixes its relentless grasp of the body of man, reducing him to a mere shadow in a short time, and rendering him physically and mentally useless, can be driven from the body by the use of HOSTETTER'S RENOWNED BITTERS. Further, none of the above-stated diseases can be contracted, even in exposed situations, if the Bitters are used as per-directions. And as they neither create in exposed situations, if the Bitters are used as per directions. And as they neither create an area nor offend the palate, and render unnecessary any change of dict or interruption of ordinary pursuits, but promote sound sleep and healthy digestion, the complaint is read and healthy digestion, the complaint is read united as speedily as is consistent with the production of a thorough and permanent cure.

For Persons in Advanced Years, who are resuffering from an enfeebled constitution and infirm body, these Bitters are invaluable as a suffering from an enfeebled constitution and infirm body, these Bitters are invaluable as a responsive of strength and vigor, and need only he tried to be appreciated. And to a mother while nursing these Bitters are indispensable, especially where the mother's nour-sishment is inadequate to the demands of the child, consequently her strength must yield, and here it is where a good tonic, such as Illostetter's Stomach Bitters, is needed to impart a temporary strength and vigor to the system. Ladies should by all means try this remedy for all cases of debility, and, before so doing, should ask their physician, who, if he is acquainted with the virtue of the Bitters will recommend their use in all cases of weakness.

CAUTION .- We caution the public against using any of the many imitations or counterfeits, but ask for Hostetten's Celebrated STONACH BITTERS, and secretar each bottle has the words "Dr. J. Hastetter's Stomach Bitters" blown on the side of the bottle, and stamped on the metallic cap covering the cork, and observe that our autograph signature is on the label.
