JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE.

Just before the battle, mother,
While upon the field I'm standing,
Thinking of my home and God,
For well they know that on the morrow,
Some may sleep beneath the sod,
Farewell, mother, you may never
See me to your heart again;
But Oh! you'll not forget me, mother,
Though I'm numbered with the slain.

Oh! how I love to see you,
Mother, sitting at your loom,
But I'll never leave our standard,
Till I honor it with blood.
The tritons all around you,
How their cruel words you know,
That in battle all our soldiers,
Said and sang to you the foe.

Oh! how I love to see you,
Mother, sitting at your loom,
But I'll never leave our standard,
Till I honor it with blood.
The tritons all around you,
How their cruel words you know,
That in battle all our soldiers,
Said and sang to you the foe.

Oh! how I love to see you,
Mother, sitting at your loom,
But I'll never leave our standard,
Till I honor it with blood.
The tritons all around you,
How their cruel words you know,
That in battle all our soldiers,
Said and sang to you the foe.

FROM PHILADELPHIA.

A Terrible Omination—The Recent Peace Overtures—Business and Finance—The Draft.

Philadelphia, Feb. 21, 1865.

The terrible calamity that has befallen our city during the past few days, is a sad and a sad one. It is a sad one because it is a calamity that has befallen our city during the past few days, is a sad and a sad one. It is a sad one because it is a calamity that has befallen our city during the past few days, is a sad and a sad one.

A COINCIDENCE.

The fall rain dripped down heavily. The brown smoke rose up from the chimneys, and the gutters were overflowing, and the boughs of the trees were dripping with rain. The wind was blowing from the north, and the clouds were dark and heavy. The sun was hidden behind a thick veil of clouds, and the sky was a gloomy, overcast gray.

REMARKS.

By George H. Wells, Esq., of Susquehanna county, Pa., at the meeting of the Pennsylvania State Convention, held at Harrisburg, Pa., on the 21st of February, 1865.

The State of Pennsylvania is now about to decide, by the action of her representatives, whether she will ratify the new Constitution of the United States, which was adopted by the Convention held at Philadelphia, Pa., on the 17th of September, 1850.

THE BOMBARDMENT OF DENMARK.

A writer in the London Illustrated describes the romantic history of Denmark.

It is a region lying close upon the borders of a sea whose white breakers roll northward till they reach the coast of the island of Zealand, where they are broken by the rocks of the island of Zealand, where they are broken by the rocks of the island of Zealand.

ABSTRACTED GENT.

"Old Ruppel's" was the name of a man who had been a member of the Pennsylvania State Convention, and who had been a member of the Pennsylvania State Convention, and who had been a member of the Pennsylvania State Convention.
