Every horse in the country ought if possible, to have at least a few weeks run in the pasture. It will do for him what no kind of medicine or nursing can do as well. It will improve his hoofs, his hair and skin, his wind, digestion, and blood, will take out stiffness and lameness, and put on flesh and infuse new life generally.

Before turning horses out, it is well to accustom them gradually to that kind of food, by cutting a little grass for them each day, or allowing them to "bait" for an hour or so daily in the back yard. And when let out they should not have "flush" feed at first, as they will be likely to over-ent, and injure themselves both in their looks and their wind. The best grass for a horse pasture is a mixture of Timothy, Blue Grass, and Red Top. Horses relish this feed better when it is moderately short. When they are to be turned out for any length of time, and not be used much in the meanwhile, they should have on only a light pair of shoes. This will allow the hoofs to come in close contact with the soft carth, and will prevent contraction. Where horses cannot enjoy pasturage, they should have fresh cut grass as often as convenient and should have their stall floors covered with tan bark, or better, have the planks taken up and clay floors laft. better, have the planks taken up and clay floor

How to Make Corn-Pudding.

"But have you nothing farther to tell me," she continued, about corn-puddings?"

"I have," I answered; "and as many other persons besides 'H. Franco' may like to eat of corn-puddings, and as I know you will be likely to circulate the account through the sewing-circle"—here Mrs. Gray looked vexed—"I will give you the recipe for making this truly delectable dish, which is of Indian origin, improved upon by the Quakers, and which, when eaten, should constitute the sole repast of what is known in Nantucket under the name of 'tea."

"Take four dozen full cars of sweet green corn"—here I got off the fence, and began to pluck the ears—"score the kernels and cut them from the cob with a knife. Pound the corn cut off in a mortar. Add a pint and a half or one quart of milk, according to the younguess and juciness of the corn. Add four eggs well beaten, a half tea-cup of flour, a half tea-cup of butter, a table-spoonful of sugar, and a sufficient quantity of salt. Bake in a well greased earthen dish, in a hot oven, two hours. Place it on the table browned and smoking hot. Eat it with plenty of fresh butter and be thankful."

Having by this time picked the necessary number of ears, I gave Mrs. Gray to understand that we would go home, and that I would inmediately proceed to make the pudding, which, much to the indignation of the cook, and the intense delight of the black by, I did. My wife, when we came to eat it, declared it was equal to anything of which she had ever partaken, and declared that if I would only go to New York and open a Corn-Pudding Shop, I might make my fortune.—My Married Life at Hillside. " But have you nothing farther to tell me," she

Hogs in the Apple Orchard,

Nobody sends such apples to market as my

Nobody sends such apples to market as my neighbor John Jacobs. He always has apples to sell, and gets the highest prices. Folks prefer fair, large apples; and such are always packed in Jacobs' barrels. You might search them with a candle, and not find a knotty fruit or a worm hole. Such Rhode Island Greenings and Roxbury Russets I have never met within the old States. They are as handsome as anything in the virgin soils of the West.

I was going by Jocobs' orchard last summer, and I had the curiosity to call and examine for myself. Says I, "Neighbor, what is there in your soil that makes such smooth, large apples? They are a third bigger than anything I can get, and my trees look as well as yours."

"The secret is not in the soil," John replied, with a twinkle in his eye, "but on it. Do you see those grunters there? My pork brings me fifty cents a pound—eight in flesh, and the balance in fruit. I becam to pasture my orchard ten years ago with hogs, and since that time I have had no trouble with wormy fruit. Apples, as a general thing, don't fall from the trees wheels an idea with the proper when any less something is the matter with them. The apple worm and curcuillo lay their eggs in the fruit, and the apples drop early. The pigs deyour the apples, and by September every unsound apple is gone and I have nothing but fair fruit left. The crop of insects for the next year is destroyed by the pigs. They root around under the trees, keep the soil loose, manure the land some, and work over what manure I spread. The apples help the piga, and the pigs help the land some, and work over what manure I spread. The apples help the piga, and the pigs help the lands some, and have profited.

apples."
I saw John's secret at once, and have prefited by it. I never had so few insects as this spring and I have given the pigs credit for it. In turn ing the orchard into a pasture, put in pigs—not landpikes, with snouts like levers. You might lose trees as well as insects in that case. But well bred animals, with judicious snouts, will root in a subdued and Christian-like manner.— American Agriculturist.

House the Tools.

Many Farmers, especially laborers of the irresponsible sort, have a shiftless habit of leaving their tools and implements wherever they used them last. We have had constant difficulty on our own farm, in having these things kept in their place, and find the habit so inveterate among farm hands that it is hard to endure it.—Nothing is more indicative of bad farming, for a carelessness which commences with the tools will extend through all the ramifications of the season's work. "A place for everything and everything in its place," is, and ought to be the motto of every good farmer and mechanic. It is only by this practice sedulously pursued, that tools can be kept in fit condition for use, proper economy insured in the expenses of the farm, and all its operations performed with the requisite facility. Without good tools work will be ill done and always behind hand.—Working Farmer.

MERIDIAN MARK.-Many farmers who live remote from the town clock, find a meridian mark very convenient. One is easily made. Fasten a planed board horizontally where the sun shines planed beard horizontally where the sun shines. Now take the compasses and strike several circles inside of each other. Set up a pin in the centre so that the shadow of the head of the pin will strike one of the circles in the torenoon, and mark the point. Then watch when itstrikes the same circle in the afternoon, and also make a mark. Now take half the distance between the two marks and draw a line from that point through the centre of the meridian. The shadow of the pin on that line is your noon mark.—Having ascertained this, you can easily transfer Having ascertained this, you can easily transfer it to any part of the house when most convenient.—Maine Farmer.

How to Make an Omeler.—The proper way to make an omelet is to take three teaspoonfuls of milk for each egg, and a pinch of salt to each one also. Bent the eggs lightly for three or four minutes, and pour them into a hot pan in which a piece of butter the size of a walnut has been melted a moment before. The mass will begin to bubble and rise in flakes immediately, and the better must be lifted increasantly with a clean bottom must be lifted incessantly with a clean knife so that the softer parts run in. An omelet should be cooked three or four minutes, and made in this way will melt in the mouth.—Sci-

The war has demonstrated the advantages of good farming. Those farmers who had their land in good condition, and who were thus enabled to get good crops, have made money, while the poor farmer, who at the best receives little more than a bare return for his labor, has derived no benefit from high prices. His extra expenses have increased in greater ratio than his extra receipts. If the experience of the last two years does not convince farmers of the advantages of a higher system of agriculture, nothing will.—Genexe Furmer.

DRACK OFF THE WATER.—Surface drains are by no means as good as underdrains, but still they are very useful. A furrow made by a plow will drain off more water in a day than the sun will evaporate in a week. If there is any water lying on land that you wish to plow this spring, lose no time in draining it off. It will pay for the labor ten times over.

One of the correspondents of the Genese Farmer, who is quite successful with his sheep, says he always keeps a bucket of tar, and whenever he hears a cough he smears the nose of the oslice dittilition of from a
