A Chance for Horse Dealers .- Officers return A Chance for Horse Dealers.—Officers returning them the war are selling their horses at very low cases, and the government is disposing of the surges piece of about thirty dollars each. There will be a great opportunity for speculators for several months to come, in purchasing an immense amount of government property, which will be doubtless artificed at very low prices.

The nature of the wound renders the so of the arm probable, but there are hopes it can taxed. Dr. Lathrop, of Montrose, was called to trend the case.—Bradford Reporter.

Vuriola—Small Pox.—A remedy and cure for the small pox came in the Rural New-Yorker of Varch 18th. It is the Pitcher plant, called by some sub-easilier plant, and Adam's cur. (See Mrs. Lin-min's Botany, Page 168, Class XII, Order 1, A sin-

A decoction of the roots will stop the fever in any stare, and those persons taking care of the sick, and the families drinking of it will not take the disease. The writer says, that since its virtues have sen known, it has been kept in the drug stores of that town—Galt, Halton County, Canada West.

The plant grows in swamps or marshes. It grows a soundance in a marsh two miles from Hariord clilare. Would some one procure the plants for the sick of Susquehanna and give it a trial?

Vaccina—Cow Pox is essentially the same disease a varola. It is generally inoculated into the system.

The question is asked, is it right to give a disease to ward off a disease?

The convenience and spacionsness of the grounds admit of a more interesting and profitable demonstration than any other grounds in northern Pennylvania. Farmers, bring your cattle, hogs, sheep, butter, and grain, and fill up every space in the buildings and grounds. Nover again allow the spectators to say there is no exhibition in the agricultural department. You have no entrance or competitors fee to pay. Then attend the fair, and make your department what it should be. The extensive acquaintance, affable manners, and good ability of the new President, render an interesting and profitable fair doubly sure.

Changes in the School Law.—The following changes in the School Law of Pennsylvania were adopted by the late Legislature:

1. Clerks of the Courts of Quarter Sessions are required to furnish the State Superintendent a certificate of the formation of any school district, whether by the incorporation of a borough, the establishment of an independent district, or the creation of a new township.

2. The President of a school board is required to call a meeting of the directors upon a written request of three of their number. In case of refusal, two directors may call a special meeting, and the business transacted thereat shall be legal.

3. It is absolutely necessary, in order to secure a share of the State appropriation, that no teacher shall have been employed in the district during the year who had not a valid certificate from the County Superintendent, and suc that the school shall have been kept open for the last four months subsequent to the first Monday in June preceding.

4. This section relates to the election of County Superintendent. It provides that the State Super intendent shall commission such aubordinates as are certified to have been elected at the trennial conventions, provided that objections be not made, signed by one fifth of the boards of directors of the County, and sworn to by at least three of the signers within thirty days after election.

5. The minimum age for admissibility into the Common Schools is raised from five to siz years. Another supplement practically abolishes the system of district institutes and re-establishes the school month at 22 days. District institutes may be held on two of these days, but they are permitted not required.

The last supplement complex County Commisnot required.

The last supplement compels County Comm

sioners to make return of the triennial enumeratio of taxables in each district on or before the first Monday in June 1865. Upon these returns the di-tribution of the State appropriation is to be based. Co. B. 17th Pa. Cavalry.—The following communication gives some account of the doings of this gallant company:

10 months.

In the morning of life have these two elisters bid adieu to weeping parents, and the sorrows of earth, to flourish forever by the river of life, where they are beckening to the father and mother to steer straight for the shore. They were greatly beloved by their associates, and doting parents to whose authority they always cheerfully yielded. They where cheerful and amiable and long will their memory be cherished by all who knew them. They gave satisfactory evidence of a change of heart, yet, oh how sad to see death wither them in their bloom; but thanks be to Israel's God, though death has robbed these fond parents of their lovely flowers, they are transplanted to bloom forever hard by the Throne.

The hard to give them up so young, rinom torever hard by the Throne.

'This hard to give them up so young,
With that yet joyous love,
Like those who have been summoned with
A whisper from the courts above.
O lay them in the quiet grave,
Where they will smile nor weep no more;
Buried in death's mournful wave,
Their joys and grief alike are o'er.
Calmly as at a process of plath;

Their joys and grief alike are o'cr.

Caimly as at approach of night
Arises the mild star of even,
Did their pure spirits wing their flight
Into the blessed realms of Heaven.
O such a happy holy end,
No tear should dim the parent's eye,
And we should weep not for our friends
Who are now with their God on high.
Yet down our cheeks will course a tear,
And grief find place in every breast
Of those who knew and loved them here,
Although we know they are at rest.
To scenes of grief, of pain and woe
Their mild blue eyes are closed now,
And the scarce whiter shroud is laid
Upon their calm and quiet brow.
O lay them in the slient tomb;
Nought on earth hath power to hold,
Anid the world, its cares and gloom,
The spirits of such heavenly mould.
There silent is the mournful sound—
Still are their hearts which once beat warm;
And now the sacred hallowed ground
Encircles their once lovely forms.
