This shallow subterfuge will fail to deceive a patriotic people .-Intelligent voters will not endorse the principles past course, and present policy of men whose hearts throughout the contest were with the seession armies, merely for the sake of voting for representatives of their doctrines who helped to lefeat the rebellion. While they will gladly embrace opportunities to reward our brave heroes with official positions, they will not be betrayed into endorsements of an organization which did all in its power in the dark days of danger and trial to render aid and comfort to the enemy.

Speech of General Sherman.

General Sherman, second only to General Gran in his services to his country, in her great day of danger, has been quoted with rare unction on seven al occasions by those opposed to the Administration of the Government. He has, in fact, been elevated by them into something of a sympathizer with their lans and principles; and notwithstanding he reused to allow them to make him a candidate for Governor of Ohio, and even went out of the way to decline all political offices, he continues to be a kind of standard reference. They will not object, therefore, to the following striking and valuabl points, contained in a short speech recently made by General Sherman at a soldiers' festival, near Lancaster, Ohio: "When the rebels ventured their all in their of

"When the rebels ventured their all in their of-forts to destroy our Government, they pledged their-lives, their fortunes, and their secred honors to their canse. The Government accepted their wager of battle. Hence, when we conquered, w. by conquest, guined all they had—their property becams ours by con-quest. Thus they lost their alves, their nules, their their horse, their cotton, their all; and even their issue, ever theirs only by our forbarranes and demaney. By this right of conquest we own this ground we stand on today, conquered from the Indians—the Shawnees, E believe. "The State of Ohio is ours by conquest from the Prench and English. "So, soldiers, when we marched through and con-quered the country of the rebels, we become owner of all they had, and I don't want you to be troubled in your consciences for taking, while on our great they had, and I don want you to be troubled in your consciences for taking, while on our great

In your consciences for taking, while on our great march, the property of conquered rebels. They for-feited their rights to it, and I, being agent for the Government to which I belonged, gave you author-ity to keep all that the quartermasters couldn't take possession of or didn't want."

A "New Nation" Commercial Ar-ticle. The business men of the "New Nation," which is represented by a restored Union, have a problem be-fore them not at all difficult of solution, and which they can themselves solve, early or late, as they choose. The great question of trade rests, as ever, on demand and supply. To create the one is the duty of the consumer; to make his advantage out of the latter is the business of the producer. Here, then, are two simple axioms, from him who supplies: ist. "Always favor that polley which creates a market." 24. "Always distrust that poll-y which would decrease conbamption." For example, to lower the wages of workmen, so that they can barely provide themeelves with food, and are necessitated to cover themselves with food, the table of wearing articles. On the contrary, to afford such rates of wages as will stimulate and enable a workman to dress com-fortably or well, is to enhance the market of wearing staffs, and bened the producers thereof. Now, as a further elucidation of this subject, we need only eluc the case of four million negro workers in the Bouthern States. Before the Rebellion, these colored workers con-sumed nothing from the Northern market, beyond some coaree wool shirts and cheap brogans. The entir four millions did not pay the North, through their masters, more than an average of two dollare per annum each.

They become independent laborers, and rise to the value of independent consumers and customers.
