AIR-Hoist up the Flag. Hurrah for our flig, boys, the red white, and blue, its old stripes and stars, boys, are just as good as new, Though traitors have assailed it and trailed it in the itust.
It floate still aloft, boys, and float there it must.
Holet up the flag, long may it wave.
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

In April, Sixty-Oue, boys, you know what was done, Those rascals down at Sumter this cruel war begun, They bruled down our flar, boys, and with many a bonst and brug.

They flaunted in its stead, boys, their rotten rebel "Hoist not that flig, never shall it wave, &c.

Oh, then, through the North, boys, how quick the news did ruu.

How bravely many thousands, then, did grasp sword and gun,
Resolving, as they hurried on, that while life retansined

The hoper of the decay of the The honor of that dear old flag should ever be main-Hoist up the flag, &c.

In the town of old Montrese, just four years ago 10-day,
A company was organized to go and join the fray;
With Dimock for their Captain they marshalled into line,
And swore that the old stag they never would resign.
Hoist up the dag, we.

From friends as kind and tender as loving friends could be, They tore themselves away, boys, to fight for you and me; From Hilton Head to Richmond they proved their Courage true, Upholding well the honor of the red, white, and Hoist up the flag, &c.

And now we well remember how we gave the part-To many of the heroes who composed that gallant band, How well they did their duty, their comrades here can tellTo bear aloft our banner, on the bloody field they fell.

The Fenian Excitement.

Fenianism appears to be spreading in the south and west of Ireland as well as in the north. A prosecution was instituted at Sligo by the constability against a militiaman, for using additious language. From the Limerick Chronicle, August 28th.

From the Limerick Chronicle, August 28th.

We have been informed, by persons who would not exagerate in the slightest degree, that drilling is going on in Clare, Crathor Woods, and the mean tainous region at the opposite side of the Shannon, the movements of the Fenians in that quarter being exactly like what the Cork Constitution described as being carried on in the environs of that city. The mountainous districts of Ireland afford considerable facilities for the drilling of Fenians, and the well disposed need not wonder at reading in the papers of the doings of the rebels in such places as the moinainous parts of Cork, Kerry, Clare, Cavan and Fermanan, where they can carry on their drill exercises, and yet excape the vigilance of the police, who may not be stationed in these seefuded quarters. The Fenians would seem to be wise in their generation in selecting the mountainous regions for their exercises, although those of Cork seem less cautious; but even the places described by our moutemparary clses, although those of Cork seem ress cannot a but even the places described by our contemporary are rocky, and of a character to cover the move-ments of the Penlans, without being detected by the ments of the Fenians, without being detected by the police, except through spies.

A gentleman in this city has received a letter from a friend resident in New York, who, writing on the subject, says that numbers of Irishmen, who cannot find employment there, are coming home; and he adds that "Fenianism is getting stronger every day." We quote, however, the heat part of his letter, in, which he save, referring to a pic-nic of the Fenians held in New York, that "there were a few captains in the army present who spoke a few words to the effect that they intended to go next year to Ireland and plant the green flag on all the old churches and castles in one night." What is really significant in the foregoing is the reference of the parties returning to Ireland in quest of work. That those fellows are Fenians there need be little doubt. The war has thrown multitudes of them much their own resources; their campaign life the save and hold them as conquered erritory. If, in spite of their rebellion, they are it to find the partie of their rebellion, they are littery. If, in spite of their rebellion, they are littery. The English Speculators in the Rebel Loss Receive Some Plain Talk from Our Gov

Washington, Sept. 18, 1865. Many of the holders of the Confederate cotton loan in England avoided the recent meeting in London, evidently for fear of an exposure of their individual complicity in the Hideulous transaction. As the London journals, therefore, seem at a loss to know who are the happy speculators, they will be enlightened by the following list of some of the British subjects who have thus invested, with an estimate of the lost sustained by them respectively:

MR. SEWARD'S CIRCULAR.

The attitude of the United States Government of the subject is plainly set forth in the following of ficial letter: MR. SEWARD TO MR. ADAMS.

Tharles Francis Adams, Esq., &c.; Charles Francis Adams, Esq., &c.;

Sin—An impression is understood to prevail in Europe; especially among the holders of the insurgent loan, for which cotton was pledged as security, that in the event of the restoration of peace in this country, this Government will assume the public debts of the insurgents, or certainly the particular debt referred to.

It is believed, however, that no impression could be more erroneous. There is no likelihood that any part of that debt will be assumed or recognized by the United States Government. It is proper and advisable, therefore, that by any proper means at Reconstruction.

Reconstruction.

Thaddens Stevens, the venerable "Father of the House," addressed his constituents on "Reconstruction," at Lancaster, Pa., on the 10th inst. Mr. Stevens holds that the National Government should accept the position in which the Southern States placed themselves "as severed from the Union," into amultivationally and rightfully severed, be it observed, and treat and hold them as conquered territory If, in spite of their rebellion, they are still State within the Union, then he contends that the National Government has no power to interfere with their domestic institutions or dictate terms of reconstruction. If, on the other hand, they are regarded as conquered territory, "then all things which we can desire to do, follow with logical and legitimate authority.
