Montrose, Pai, Tuesday, Nov. 28, 1865. THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

So many persons desire to obtain the language the Constitutional Amendment now before he States for adoption or rejection, that we reproduce it below:

produce it below:

"Joint Resolution, Jan. Sist. 1835. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, two-thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; when ratified by three-fourths of said Legislatures, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the said Constitution, namely:

intents and purposes as a purpose as a purpo

RECONSTRUCTION PROPOSALS.

The essential conditions of reconstruction as proposed by the President in form of official proclamations or dispatches, or familiar converations with Southern men, seem to be about of the State under the rebellion, are not repeated out null and void.

"Third—The declaration that the obligations of the national dabt must be shared by the South, in common with all the other States.

"Fourth—The ratification by the initial State Legislatures of the amendment of the Federal Constitution abolishing and forever prohibiting slavery within the limits and jurisdiction of the United States.

"Fifth—The concession of the civil rights of citizens, in the courts, etc., to the emancipated blacks.

It is difficult to see why he should not take

It is difficult to see why he should not take one step farther, especially while prohibiting disloyal voting. For if traitors could be punished with disfranchisement for their treason, the merit of loyalty unto death, it would seem, could and should be rewarded, by the same authority, with the rights of citizenship.

SOUND DOCTRINE PROM THE FAR SOUTH The San Antonio Express, a. Texas paper openly declares these principles:

"In its political department we shall maintain "In its political department we shall maintain "Int. That the government created and extail ed by the Constitution of the United States is a league of independent sovereignties, with the r of each to withdraw, at its own pleasure, from inrediction of the league and erect itself into a urisdiction of the league and erect itself into se rate nationality—and that it was wisely not rate mallousny and created.

"2d. That the liberties of the people depend as much for safety upon maintaining the full vigor of the federal government, as upon preserving unimpaired all the rights either affirmed to the States or reserved to them in the Constitution—that these two constitute one complete system of government, not in conflict, but in harmony with each other when properly understood. when properly understood.

"3d. We shall maintain that the Union is indissoluble except by violence or by an amendment of the Constitution in the manner prescribed in that in-

Constitution in the manner prescribed in that in-trument."

It adds: "We can almost read our whole duty in three lines:

"First—Educate the people.
"Second—Give dignity to labor.
"Third—Plant upon immovable foundations the liberty of speech and of the press.
"Do these, and 'all things shall be added unto us."

These are sound principles, and we trust the Express will flourish while it maintains them The number before us remarks: "We regret to find that an opinion adverse to republican government has taken root to some extent among the people." We do not wonder at it. The tyranny of Davis, which was called republican government in the South, was not likely to make converts. But let the Express advocate before the people the principles of free speech and popular education, and it will soon con vince them that real republican government is the best in the world.

JOHN BULL'S LAST JOKE.

The pirate ship Shenandoah, after having destroyed several fleets of American whalers and erchantmen, has come back to Liverpool, and is now safely in the hands of her British owners and builders, her Captain, Waddell, having duly surrendered to the British authorities. By accident, we presume, he only heard of the close of the rebellion on the 30th of August last, although his Government had notice of his depredations, and of the manner of his fitting out in English ports, months before the surrender of Lee, and they had at least as much time to send him word of the latter event. The first act of Capt. Waddell was "to write a letter to Earl Russell," doubtless to explain his long delay, and to enumerate his successful raid upon the commerce of a friendly nation. The New York

Evening Post puts the case thus:

merce of a friendly nation. The New York

Evening Post puts the case thus:

"The London Times thinks the Shenandoah's arrival in Liverpool somewhat embarrassing, but magnanimously proposes to make everything right with us by giving us the ship. That is as though a judge should make over a burglar's immy and bunch of skeleton keys as satisfaction to the man whose house had been entered and robbed. This would be thought a brilliant idea by some persons; but it is to Panch, and not to the Time, we should have looked for the suggestion.

"The English crew of the English ship Shenandoah have, according to the latest news, been "paroled!" Why paroled, pray? The Times suggests that they might be tried for piracy, but it is not customry to "parole" pirates. But if Earl Russell holds that they were "Confederates," how in that case can he, a neutral power "parole" them? The truth is, we suppose, that the captain, and the crew of this English pirate, having run into Liverpool—their port of departure—under a fize which has no more legitimacy than the "skull and cross bones" of Captain Kidd, and having reported their piratical proceedings to Earl Russell, have been set at Berty under a promise to surrender themselves when they are wanted. Of course they will get out of the way as quickly as they can, and that is the cond of the law's denlines with them.

"That is to say, the judge hands over the burglar's immy and bunch of keys to the man mose house he has robbed, and winks to the burglar to take himself out of the way as soon as possible. That is what they call, now-a-days, English neutrality."

The President and the Freedmen. At a meeting at the Brooklyn Academy, Nov. 21 in behalf of destitute people in the South, General Fisk, who is at the head of the Freedmen's Bureau to me, "Go back, go to your work, and see justice done to both white and black. The Freedmen's Bureau will only cease to exist when the Southern States are resolved to deal honestly and justly by these freedmen." (Applause.) And I came away from his presence with more of faith and hope in Andrew Johnson than I have ever had.

The "Shenandoah."

icence. When the Federal army entered Austn, a man was discerned high up on the dome of the capitol, from whose hands the stars and stripes were given there to the breeze. A Germani to escape conscription he had lain for eighteen months in the cellar ol his own house, even his nearest neighbor supposing him to be sway in the Confederate service. If he did not have a right to vary his position by another on the capitol's highest planacle, flag in hand, I do not know who had the right. Had the case been submitted to me, however, I might have healtated in favor of another German, who had, for the same excellent reasons, tolled for two years on his little farm, dressed in home-spun gown and deep sunbonnet, as his wife's sister come to stay with her from a distance, during the absence of her husband in the Confederate army. Heaven bless the Germans! By their devotion to American liberty they were really fighting here the battles of oppressed people in their own fatherland.

The pirate Shenandoah arrived in the Mersey on the 6th, and surrendered to the guard-ship Donegal She is now in the hands of the British naval author-sites. The London Time in an editorial says:

The London Times in an editorial says:

"The reappearance of the Shenandoah in British waters at the present juncture is an undoward and unwaters the present juncture is an undoward and unwaters the present juncture is an undoward and unwateloome event. When we last heard of this notorious cruiser she was engaged in a pittiess raid upon American whalers in the North Pacific, and several war steamers of the United States were stated to be in pursuit of her. It was also reported, though somewhat vaguely, that our own naval commander on that station had offered any assistance in his power, and little doubt was entertained of her speedy capture. The next thing that we learn is that she entered the Mersey under the Confederate fing, that she is alongside and in charge of her Majesty's ship. Donegal, and that captain Waddell has forwarded a letter to Lord Russell. Whatever be the contents of that letter, this act is obviously equivalent to a surrender of the vessel to the Government of Great Britain, as the Stonewall was surrendered to Spanish authorities at Havana.

"With regard to the Shenandoah, we apprehend surrender of the vessel to the Government of Great haritain, as the Stonewall was surrendered to Spanish authorities at Hayana.

"With regard to the Shenandoah, we apprehend that little hesitation can be felt. On every principle of law she belongs to that Government which has succeeded to all the rights and all the property of the de facto Confederate Government. This doctrine is islid down very clearly by Vice Chancellor Fage Wood in the decision which has been so much criticated of late in America; but, in truth, it is exarely more than a rule of common sense. Lord Russell id not affect to override it by the provision in his despatch for the disarming of Confederate vessels in our ports, but, on the contrary, facilitated the application of it through a resort to the proper civil iribunals. The Captain-General of Cuba doubtless acted on the same view when he delivered over the StoneWall to the agents of the United States; nor, indeed, is it easy to imagine on whose behalf any counter claim could be preferred. What may be the technical formaities to be observed in the transfer is a matter of very little importance. Whether we ought to wait for a demand, or to make over the ship unasked, we hold it in trust for the United States, to all intents and purposes.

"It is only when we come to the personal liability of Captain Waddell and the crew that we are met by perplexing circumstances. It is now more than halfs year since the American war virtually terminated, and the ravages of the Shenandoah have been infinitely more destructive during this period than the state of the contract of the search of the man and the transfer of the search of the more than halfs year since the American war virtually terminated.

halfs year since the American war virtually terminated, and the ravages of the Shenandoah have been infinitely more destructive during this period than before. The statement of losses contained in Mr. Adams' letter of April 7th is as nothing compared with those that have since reached us from Behring's Straits and the adjoining coasts. Nearly forty whalers are said to be among the victims in those seas, and the price of sperm oil has already been ruised very largely by her depredations. Now it appears that Captain Waddell professes to have had no authentic information about the close of the war until he fell in with Her Majesty's ship, Barracouta, on the 30th of August, when he immediately consigned his guns to the hold and altered his course for Liverpool.

"We have no wish to prejudge a case which must on the soun of august, when he immediately consigned his guns to the hold and altered his course for Liverpool.

"We have no wish to prejudge a case which must become the subject of a legal inquiry, but it is impossible to let such a statement pass unchallenged. It is expressly negatived by our accounts from California, derived from the testimony of persons belonging to the ships which he had destroyed. We have their positive assurance that Captain Waddell was told of all that had happened by some of his prisoners, but refused to credit it, because it was based on Northern authority. How it could otherwise have been brought to his knowledge, or how he could expect to receive an intimation of it from an office, which, it it were true, no longer existed, it is for him to explain; for, by refusing to accept such notice, he certainly took upon himself all the responsibility of his subsequent sets. Why did he not at least run into the nearest neutral harbor to verify a report, which, unless false, so gravely compounised his further proceedings?

"It is possible that a good answer may be given to these questions, but we must repeat the onus probandi lies entirely on Captain Waddell's side. All the world knew and believed the news which he rejected, and which was not so improbable to itself as by any means to justify his obstinate akepticism. There is an old saying about none being so blind as those who won't see, and the facts here suggest an almost irresiatible suspicion that Captain Waddell's as determined not to be arrested in his dearroying career till he had done his old-enemies the utmost possible mischiet. Nor would it tend to remove this impression if it should prove to be correct that on the pilot coming on board-he asked innocently whether the war was over or not.

"It would have been a great reflect to ourselves."

pression it is anoth prove as the Country whether the war was over or not.

"It would have been a great relief to ourselves, though little to the advantage of the United States, had the Shenandoah been simply excluded from the Mersey, and left to rove the seas till she should fall into the hands of her pursuers. As it is, there seems hardly any legitimate alternative but one. Captain Waddell and his one hundred and thirty men cannot be handed over as prisoners of war upon any hypothesis consistent with that of the war being at an end. Nor under any circumstances use they be given over to the United States. They might possibly be prosecuted under the Foreign Enlistment Act, but experience has shown the extreme difficulty of establishing offenses of that nature.

"The crime of which they really stand accused—supposing them to have wiffelly ignored the termination of hostilities—is that of piracy, and on this charge it is possible that they may be apprehended, charge it is possible that they may be apprehe and tried before an English court of justice."

sung by the poet, I understand now better than ever before.

"General Rosecrans has a brother in Texas, or a cousin, I know not which, of the same name, a strong Union man. Generally he maintained his silence under all circumstances. One morning, at the Postoffice, he learned, as the latest news, that John Morkan had been incarcerated in the Ohlo penitentiary. But what emsperated the crowd there beyond measure was the statement that John's head had been shaved. No words were strong enough to express their wrath. 'Oh! I don't know, gentlemen; I don't know,' said Rosecrans, and he never would have dared the remark if he had not been a physician as well as a Union man. 'Head shaved, is it? Well, then, it is in excellent condition to be blistered, you know! 'That night, I believe it was, the doctor ascertained that the best treatment of his own case was to fly from the place. He did, but is now there again in government amploy." The Result of the Recent Elections y sums up the result of the late elections. As
