Several things are essential to render a barnyard a good one. It must be so constructed that water from any source will not accumulate in it. It must not be uncomfortably wet or disagreeably muddy for stock. The surface must also be firm so that coarse manure will not be pressed down into the soft earth and thus-make hard pitching. These are the main requisites.

Now the first thing is to provide for carrying off the surplus water that will be liable to find its way among the manure. Cut a good ditch entirely around the yard not less than 30 inches deep and fill it with tiles if they can be obtained or with plank. Stones will be just as good to drain the soil and carry off the water. But the draines are more liable to be filled up by rats. This drain will keep the ground dry on each side of it and will not carry off the liquid manure. Conduct all the water by eaves-troughs from the roof of the barn and sheds into this underdrain.

The next step is to grade the yard either by hauling earth away leveling off the knolls or by drawing in compact earth to fill up the depressions. The surface of the yard should always descend gradually from the barn and sheds.

There ought also to be buildings or cheap sheds on every side of the yard. Excavate at the lowest part so that liquid from all rarts of the yard will descend to that place and there sink a sugar hogshead and cover it with plank so that nothing can fall into it. Then set a cheap pump in this hogshead pump up the liquid and send it in board or bark troughs among the soild manure in any part of the yard. This will be a perfect security against its heating and becoming firefanged.

The next job will be to pave the whole or a stream of the part of the part between the soil manure in any part of the yard. This will be a perfect security against its heating and becoming firefanged.

The next job will be to pave the whole or a portion of it. Flat stones three or four feet square are objectionable for heavy cattle liable to slip on large stones so as to injure themselves.—Were they to slip not more than two teet there would be little danger of harm. Some parts may be paved with boulders of a certain size and then those of another size may be used in another place. Large stones and small ones may be placed side by side by excavating a little for the large ones so that the surfaces of each will be equal. Stretch a line across the yard and lay the top of each row of stones even with the line. In this way there will be little or no difficulty in making the surface of the pavement even. When laying the stones the workman needs a trowel to place sand or fine gravel beneath thin or small stones to raise them up to the line and a rammer made of a billet of hard wood with an iron ring like that of a beetle on the bottom of it to drive those stones that are too high down even with the line.

After the paving is finished spread sand, gravel, or finely pulverized clay all over the pavement and work it into the interstices. This will make a barn-yard that every farmer will be proud of. On many farms there are loose stones enough lying in the fields to pave several yards. Where stones are scarce the surface may be covered with gravel or clay or compact earth instead of stones. Where timber is cheap a yard can be paved with wood by sawing off logs five or six inches long with a drag saw and placing them on the end. This would make a pavement that could not fail to please the most incorrigible faultfinder or grumbler. Hemlock, pine, oak of all kinds and many other kinds of wood sawed into paving blocks and well tarred on the lower ends with coal tar would last many years, always making a very smooth and agreeable surface to The next job will be to pave the whole or a portion of it. Our Pasture Lands.

It is seldom that our pasture lands receive much attention, and yet there is probably no part of farming that would pay better for the time and money spent upon them, if it were judiciously applied. We allow many of them to run up to bushes. Others are neglected and suffered to take care of themselves, in some cases, perhaps, because we dont know what to do for them, in others because the cultivated lands demand, or seem to demand all the manure we have to stare on the farm. How different is have to spare on the farm. How different is this from the careful management of the Dutch farmers who devote their attention to the dairy, especially to the manufacture of cheese. They turn out their cows to pasture about the time we do—that is about the first or middle of time we do—that is about the first or middle of May. The pasture is separated from the mowing lots by hurdles. About the middle of August the hurdles are removed and the cattle allowed to feed over the whole till the first of November, when they are put into the barn. The rate at which they are pastured is five cows and six sheep on five acres of land. It is found that the sheep earl down the coarse grasses which the six sheep on five acres of land. It is found that the sheep cat down the coarse grasses which the cows reject and leave, and thus help create a close and fine sward. Now to keep up a fertility that will support this heavy feeding, something must be done for the pastures. After the cows are taken to the stall, the ditches, which everywhere intersect the farms of Holland, serving for public ways by means of flat boats in summer and skates in winter, are dredged, the mud and weeds haved on the past and piled in weeds hauled out upon the banks, and piled in rows from thirty to thirty-three feet long. in the weeds hauled out upon the banks, and piled in rows from thirty to thirty-three feet long, in the form of a triangular prism, three feet wide and six to eight inches high. This mud is allowed to remain awhile subject to the frost. But soon after the cows are stalled the semi-liquid manure is carried out to the heaps of mud, the piles opened and the manure covered up, and mixed by means of forks. In January or February, is the weather permits, or later in spring if not, this rich compost is spread over the pastures and causes the utmost luxuriance of grasses in this moist climate and rich lands. This is the general practice upon the dairy farms of Holland.—The keeping of an equal number of sheep along with cown is a common practice also in England, especially upon dairy farms. It is estimated that the cost of treating pastures as indicated is about seventeen dollars an acre in Holland, and that it pays is shown in the fact that the farmers of Holland are generally well off, many of them rich, made so by a judicious course of farming. We mention this to show that a judicious outlay in the improvement of pasture lands is the great secret of success in the great dairy region of Europe, and to suggest that we can take a lesson from them in the management of our own lands. Give them more manure and they will carry more stock. A cooldon-dressing now and then Give them more manure and they will carry more stock. A good top-dressing now and then will do them no harm, and in many cases they need it quite as much as the mowing lots. If others can spend so much and get such returns cant we undertake spmething of the same sort?

GLYCERINE.—A bottle of this should be kept in every family. It is a clear, colorless syrup, sweet, and forms the main principle in fats. It has no smell if pure, hence it is not disagreeable. For chapped hands or feet it is excellent, preventing the air from reaching the skiu, and hence keeping it moist, the great property of a cure in such cases. It is perhaps the best hair oil in the world, and never takes on taint (heat not decomposing it save at 600 degrees). Besides it keeps the hair moist, as it has the merit of not being dried by air, but, on the contrary, draws moisture from the atmosphere. Thus it makes a sweet, pure, durable oil for the hair. It is also the principal medicine for ear complaints, espethe principal medicine for ear complaints, espe-cially in a dry ear. Pour a few drops in the Manuriko Trees.—Some people, in setting fruit and other trees, have made the mistake of applying manure directly upon the roots. That is a ruinous practice, as the fibres of roots of is a ruinous practice, as the fibres of roots of trecs can only derive sustanance by direct contact with the earth. When trees of any kind are set out, the roots should first be covered with a rich loam, well trodden down, and upon this loam a little manure of any kind may be safely placed; but it is better to spread it upon the surface of the ground, where it acts as a mulch, and prevents any injury to trees from drouth, unless very severe and long protracted.

CARBOTS FOR HORSES.—Experiments have shown that the best way to feed carrots to horses is in connection with onts. Alone, carrots are not as good as outs fifthe, but in conjunction they are better than each fed separately. If you are in the habit of feeding four quarts to a mess, give two of cats and two of siliced carrots, and the result will be more satisfactory than if each were fed separately.

general rule, less liable to injury from the vicissitudes of the weather than those on southern slopes. One reason of this is that the buds do not start so early in the spring, and therefore less likely to be effected by the cold winds and frosts of early spring.

The best cows for milk are almost always thinboned, especially the legs and tail. A thin neck is another good point. A quiet good-na timed disposition is another excellent quality in
