Hearing, Keeping and Fattening Domestic Animals.

The season of fattening domestic animals is now well advanced. The farmer who has a large flock of sheep, or a number of hogs, or a few head of cattle, should be particularly careful to see that his animals are properly cared for. It is not enough to feed them well, but they must also be kept in good health. This can be done by giving them a good deal of exercise, and by keeping them in a clean and healthy environment. The farmer should also be careful to see that his animals are properly sheltered from the weather, and that they have plenty of clean water to drink. By following these simple rules, the farmer can ensure that his animals are kept in good health, and that they are properly fattened for market.

has brought $1.35 a fleece, this season. Men are buying large flocks in Mexican States, Missouri, Tennessee, and elsewhere, to drive into the Northern parts of Texas. Sheep-husbandry, beginning to excite considerable attention at the South and South-West.

A woman who has a large flock of sheep, and who is very particular in her management, has a good deal to say in favor of the sheep. She says that she has a good deal of experience in the management of sheep, and that she has found that the best way to manage them is to keep them in good health, and to give them a good deal of exercise. She also says that she has found that the best way to fatten them is to give them a good deal of clean water to drink, and to keep them in a clean and healthy environment.

- The following is the way to ruin a flock:
1. Let them have their own way.
 2. Allow them to graze on any kind of food.
 3. Let them run where they please on a hillside.
 4. Allow them to use the brandy bottle and tobacco pipe.
 5. Let them associate with the idle and dissipated.
 6. Call them to account for their absence only in the winter.
 7. Give them no regular employment.
- These rules, strictly followed for twelve months will finish his doubtful education.
