Stimulating. Wm. W. Galt.

Mr. Evans' Experience.—In nothing do we witness such a perfect recklessness and entire want of economy on the part of the tillers of the soil, as is exhibited in the waste of those substances which tend to the nutrition, or the stimulus of plants. What a vast amount of them is yearly and daily wasted, which might, by proper economy, be made subservient to the most salutary and beneficial results! Farmers are, generally, too remissly far in the preservation of manures.

It is a matter of no ordinary moment, to preserve and apply whatever can possibly tend to increase a crop. Yet very few farmers are diligent in this respect. A great majority of our farmers neglect to attend properly to the matter, and suffer serious losses on that account. Most especially, it is true that, by many farmers, ashes are not saved and applied to the production of vegetable manures. Some soil this valuable manure to ash-peddlers for an insignificant sum; others apply it to waste about their premises unattended. Either course exhibits a lamentable want of economy on their part.

When our farmers are aware of the value of both leached and unleached ashes as a stimulating matter, it does seem that they would not be guilty of such expensive folly as a thing them for feasts per bushel, or letting them go to waste. Ashes, on most soils, and in most seasons, are not so equal in the whole catalogue of stimulants. "We have seen" that they are not equal in all seasons.

During the past season, I have made some experiments, using the best of all kinds. The result should not be more than one-third full, at some times. Let it stand at least two weeks, the older the better. Shake it well once a day, or twice, if you think, add water. This mixture, with warm water and slum, will color any shade of blue in five minutes.

Patent Combination Locks.—This is a new and improved lock, which is not only fire-proof, but also burglar-proof. It is made of the finest materials, and is guaranteed to last for many years. It is now on hand at the following stores:
