

Best Potato Table.

Before the advent of all kinds in the potato market...

It is also well known by those that this is a better mode of raising these two crops than planting them separately.

Mr. N. S. Nichols, of a county of Louisiana, in this respect, writes that he has recently had some corn in single rows, eight feet apart, and dropped a few rows of potatoes in the spaces between the corn.

It is probable, also, that another reason why these two crops are better raised in this way than in the usual manner is that the corn follows in the above named succession in this.

Some notes for 1884. We have often called attention to the fact that the potato is a crop of the future.

After a year of the land, and all owing it to be well watered by the natural rain, much of the roots of the plants were killed.

Some persons imagine that if the roots or hills of these or other crops are not well watered...
