Prof. Webster's Petition for Pardon.

The following is the petition of Professor Webster to the Governor and Council of Massachusetts, referred to in his confession; which was withdrawn on the 4th of June:

To His Excellency, George W. Briggs, and to the Honorable Council of the State of Massachusetts:

Having been convicted before the Supreme Judicial Court of the murder of Dr. Parkman, I would most respectfully and humbly petition your Excellency and the Honorable Council, to be permitted to declare, in the most solemn manner, that I am entirely innocent of this awful crime—that I never entertained any other than the kindest feelings towards him, and that I never had any inducement to injure him whom I have so long numbered among my best friends.

To Him who seeth in secret, and before whom I may ere long be called to appear, I would appeal for the truth of what I now declare, as also for the truth of the solemn declaration, that I had no agency in placing the remains of a human body in or under my room in the Medical College in Boston, nor do I know by whom they were so placed there. I am a victim of circumstances, or a foul conspiracy, or of the attempt of some individuals to cause suspicion to fall upon me, influenced, perhaps, by the prospect of obtaining a large reward

When first charged with this dreadful crime, I did not publish to the world a declaration of my innocence or any explanation of the circumstances tending to bring suspicion on me, solely in consequence of entire ignorance of the course I ought to adopt, and implicit reliance on the calmer judgment of others. I had, however, prepared a document for publication to that effect, but as there was a strong disposition from some, the first to misinterpret my every look, action, and expression, it was deemed more advisable for me to preserve and maintain silence.

The document was, therefore, with no struggle on my part, withheld. Immediately upon my arrest, every means was resorted to to bend even the most trifling appearances in my laboratory, and insignificant circumstances to add to the suspicions, and to pervert them to my disadvantage.

In the state of mind in which I was, silence was constantly urged upon me; and I complied more strictly, perhaps, than I ought to have done.. Every method of poisoning the public mind, and of exciting prejudice against me, was resorted to.—Falsehoods, imputations and fabrications were daily diffused; and I soon perceived that the contradiction of one would lead to the utterance of others, and that the refutation of them all would be an endless task I therefore submitted in silence and resignation, believing that the time must shortly arrive when He "who bringeth light out of darkness" would cause the truth to appear, and my innocence be made manifest to all.

Had I previously been aware of the use that was to be made of some circumstances on my trial, to give an unjust and erroneous impression, if explained, I should have been provided with evidence to explain them most satisfactorily.

Some of the statements, references and circumstances, however, could not be fully explained or disproved; unfortunately, I could not avail myself of the proof to do it. I now pray your honors that the evidence may be received by you, and that the testimony of my wife may be heard and received, as also my own statement and explanations.

Repeating, in the most solemn and positive manner, and under the fullest sense of my responsibility as a man and a christian, that I am wholly innocent of this charge—to the truth of which the Searcher of all Hearts" is a witness, I would humbly and respectfully pray that this privilege I have asked may be granted I do this under the full belief that the testimony and explanations I may, and would now offer, are such as will disprove many things, and impair very greatly the evidence of at least two witnesses, and place in the true light circumstances now obscure.

On this review of my case, your honors will, I trust, find sufficient reasons for reversing the decisions of the Court, and for the interposition of mercy. The knowledge of my feelings and habits, and of my various engagements and occupation of time, both before and after the disappearance of Dr. Parkman, have, from the first, been sufficient assurances to my afflicted family of my innocence; and now that their trust in Him, who has sustained both them and me in our days and nights of sorrow and sadness, has been shaken by the unlocked for result of my trial, they would pray to be permitted to unite with him their sole earthly dependence in this petition.

Believing that your Excellency, and the Honorable Council will find sufficient grounds for granting me a pardon, and of restoring to them the husband and father, for which I most respectfully and humbly pray,

Signed JOHN W. WEBSTER

The Case of Prof. Webster.

Mrs. Webster and her Daughters before the Governor.
From the Boston Bee, July 4

It will be remembered that the Rev. Dr. Putnam, in his argument before the Governor and Council, on the occasion of presenting the confession of Prof. Webster to that honorable body, on Tuesday morning last, requested, if the decision of the Committee of the Council should be favorable to the request of Prof. Webster, that they would allow him a further hearing.

Since the presentation of the confession, the Committee, in order to understand its full bearing, submitted it to a board of Surgeons, one of whom was Dr. Warren. A meeting of the Council was notified yesterday afternoon, and Dr. Putnam was requested to be present.

About an hour before the meeting of the Council, Mrs. Webster and her three daughters arrived at the Council Chamber, and obtained an interview with Gov. Briggs and his honor Lieut Gov. Reed.

Mrs. Webster was dressed in deep mourning. Her three daughters seemed sorrow-stricken and almost heart-broken. Mrs. Webster is evidently a woman of great hope—firm and persevering to the last.—The eldest daughter exhibits in a great degree the same valuable traits—doubly valuable during this most terrible struggle through which they have been called to pass. The other two do not look like the same beautiful girls who testified in behalf of their father at the trial. Their charmingly healthful appearance has been exchanged for one more sickly and sad.

Mrs. Webster, in conversation with Gov. Reed, said that she and her daughters respectfully prayed for a commutation of her husband's sentence. His previous letters to the Council, she said, asking for a pardon, were written at her earnest solicitation. She strongly believed in his innocence, or she never would have consented to their presentation. "We feel assured of that; no one doubts your sincerity, Mrs. Webster," said Gov Briggs, who had until now sat a silent listener. "I feel that she must have committed the deed in a moment of great provocation I cannot persuade myself that it was otherwise," continued Mrs. Webster; "he did it not upon his children—he was a good, kind husband —and oh, sir, we earnestly hope and pray that you may find it consistent with the cause of justice and humanity to save him and our whole family from the ruin and deep disgrace which threatens."

The Lieut. Governor replied to something which she said. Mrs. Webster misaking his words, looked earnestly into his face, her eyes streaming with tears, and said, with a force I shall never forget: "Did you say, Sir, it is impossible to commute his sentence?" "Oh, I can't tell you that Madam—the subject is before the committee. All I say is, we will try most conscientiously to serve you, and save your husband It is a most painful duty."

Mrs Webster said she wished to assure his Excellency that she was instrumental in his presenting his confession to their consideration, and desired that they would consider it as favorable as duty would permit. Mrs. Webster and her daughters then retired.

The Council immediately assembled Dr. Putnam was present. Lieut Gov. Reed, presiding, said to the Doctor that he was invited to come there in order that the Council might communicate to him some important information which their committee had obtained from a Board of Surgeons, respecting certain statements made by Prof Webster in his confession The Lieutenant Governor informed the Doctor that the Council chose to communicate to him, because he seemed to be the only person who appeared in the Professor's behalf.

Dr Putnam said he had appeared before the Council as a citizen—having that information (the confession) which circumstances had placed in his possession—and not delegated; therefore he did not deem it his duty to act in any other capacity than as a friend and listener. He would hear anything they had to present, and then he would consult Prof. Webster and his counsel.

Dr. Bell was about reading the statement to Dr Putnam, when it was suggested that the document should not go forth to the public until the final report of the Committee is made.

We understand the result of the Surgeons' investigation leaves a doubt in the minds of the Council upon three points.—

First, the weapon with which Dr. Webster said he struck Dr Parkman. Secondly, the time which he stated Dr. Parkman lived after the blow was inflicted; and, thirdly, the clashing of his petition with his confession. In the opinion of the Surgeons they are all inconsistent. The Council meet again next Monday, when the final decision will be made.

BOSTON, Monday, July 8.

A hearing was had before the Committee on Pardons this morning in Webster's case. The Lieutenant Governor stated that a large number of petitions for commutation had been received; one from Mr. Green, a Juryman in the case, two or three others from persons who said they themselves committed the murder and not Professor Webster. Several medical men showed that blows on the head such as that which Professor Webster said he gave Dr. Parkman, often caused death in a short period, Mr. Edwin Jarvis cited two instances to show the ungovernable temper of Professor Webster, and how soon it was over. In one case Dr. Webster, when a student, commenced the play of knocking off hats with another student, in which Webster was rather the worst off; finally Webster got enraged, seized a stick, and would have given a deadly blow had he not been prevented. The next day he showed no resentment.

At another time in London Webster was being shaved, when Dr. B Latchford playfully remarked, "Did you ever see a barber shave a monkey?" Webster was much enraged, seized a knife, and would have struck Dr. L. had he not been prevented Dr. Jeffries Wyman was introduced to show that Dr. Parkman's skull was a little thinner than the average. A petition was presented by Prof. Bowen, signed by President Sparks and nearly all the Professors of Harvard, praying for a commutation; not on the ground of his late confession, he (as they say) having forfeited all claim to be believed, on the great probability that exists that the act was not premeditated. Prof. Bowen urged for delay to obtain more distinct petitions, and a final decision in the case was postponed till the 18th inst.

FIGHT WITH A BEAR.—We are informed that a gentleman by the name of Ryder, residing in the Red Woods, came in contact with one of these grisley monsters the other day, and came out but second best, although he exhibited no lack of either courage or coolness in the contest.—Mr. R. had gone out in the dusk of evening in search of cattle, and was passing, as he supposed, three bullocks, when, pausing for a moment to examine them, they proved to be three bears, sitting side by side. In a moment two of them bounded off, the third and middle one made up to the man, took him by the waist and gave a gentle hug. This was taken very coolly by the apparently doomed victim, who during the operation, took a knife from his pocket, opened it and returned the compliment by a vigorous thrust. This only enraged the beast, for he immediately changed position, seized his victim by the shoulder, tearing and lacerating the flesh horribly, and threw him violently upon the ground. At this crisis, thinking discretion the better part of valor, and possibly recollecting the old story in the spelling book of the man who in a similar predicament feigned death and cheated the bear, our hero resolved to try the same experiment. Bruin scented his victim a moment longer, then walked off, whether in the belief that he had effectually used up the unfortunate man, or frightened by the appearance of a third person in the scene, is not for us to determine. Although badly bruised and lacerated, Mr. Ryder is in a fair way of recovery.—Pacific News.

JENNY LIND.—Madlle. Jenny Lind has been giving concerts at Stockholm. According to the custom there when a noted artist arrives, the tickets for the places are put up for public sale; more than fifteen thousand persons disputed their possession, and they have been sold at exorbitant prices. Madlle Lind will quit Stockholm towards the middle of July for the waters at Elms. Her engagement in the United States commences on the first of October; but she will not embark for that country before the month of September.

THE NASHVILLE CONVENTION.—The Memphis Eagle says: "These gentlemen who have been seen recently wandering through the streets of our city, and looking unutterably mysterious and heroic things, are not Hungarian exiles, (as has been falsely reported,) but delegates on their way from the Nashville Convention"

Within four years about $15,000,000 have been expended in railroads in Vermont and New Hampshire, and nearly $70,000,000 in New England.

Gen. Bickel, the State Treasurer, paid the July interest on the State debt on Monday at the Bank of Pennsylvania.
