through the thatched roofs, and were fanned by a strong wind, that there was not a very strong opinion, which exists in impossibility of raising ladders to attempt to rescue a single individual. Many threw themselves from the lofts, and with broken limbs, by means of balloons. Upon a calmer and thither with pitcous cries. Not a single engine was in the place, and we are assured by an eye witness that the fearful catastrophe at Leop Hstadt, in Oct 1813, fades into nothing before the side of this awful calamity. Scarcely half the pilgrims were saved, and those who have named it the Land." If after that, the Colonists did the most part been much injured. The bodies of the dead were finally burnt to a cinder. It was a night never to be forgotten.

The latest advices from that there petition are yet inefficient to prevent a step on the part of the Government will be taken against the Aggressors al rising, for which purpose of the Army will side with the people.
