THE FARMER'S COLUMN.

THE FARMER.

Drive on thou sturdy farmer.
Drive cheerfully o'er the field,
The pleasures of a farmer's life
No other life can yield.

Thou riseth with the morning sun
To till the fruitful earth,
And when thy daily task is done
Thou seek'st thy peaceful hearth

Thou lovest not the gaudy town,
With its tumultuous roar,
Plenty and peace thy friends crown,
And thou dost ask no more.

Monarchs in robes with crimson dyed,
Are low compared with thee;
They are pampered sons of pride,
Thou art God's nobility.

Go on, thou sturdy farmer,
Tread proudly on thy sod,
Thy proud and goodly heritage,
Thou chosen son of God.

WORK FOR THE MONTH.

December.

First.—Continue to gather leaves from the woods and deposite them in the compost heaps, hog pens, &c.

Place fuel under cover, clean up the remnants of old wood piles, and compost them. Cut and draw wood from swamps while frozen. Underdraining may now be done when the weather is not too severe; the surface of the ground being frozen for a few inches, will not prevent ditches being dug, when the subsoil thrown to the surface by frequent frostings and thawings, will soon become well pulverized.

This is the proper time for re-reading our hackmanuals and laying out the work for the coming year. We have drawn at the time will sprout again. A small quantity of roots, turnips, carrots or parsnips put in each cow's crib, will materially increase the quantity of milk. Provide pure water for your cows, without many hens a mile from any, the cattle, and subjecting them to the annoyances of cows, &c. See that the master keeps do not tyrannize over the other ones—Give them by a plentiful allowance of food, a change of food, some variety, instead of feeding them wholesome and those on the stacks as well as the barn. Let the stalks be cleared and dry. If a horse sick with them introduced, put in his manger or on them, and they will soon be in their usual appearance and be tender—When cold, sprinkle a little feed upon them, and the cattle will eat them. If refused, put some salt in the box, water before steaming them.

O. THAN AND EARLY PEAS.—Grapes may also be planted. Gooseberry bushes should each may be pruned. Currants may be trained in spaces. Trees should fruit trees when necessary to protect them. (Also in case the ground be kept from the trunk and larger branches of fruit trees, and during dry weather apply the cow weed between the trees and the bed. If the weather be mild, and the ground unfrozen, apply grass around infected trees, digging in slightly, the rains will carry it to the roots, and prove a excellent effect will be over before the roots set fell action in the spring; water, as supplied under that time, an immediate effect might be too violent on the young rootlets.

Kitchen Garden.—Attend to the directions of last month. Cover sparingly and other crops necessary. Collect bean poles, &c. Collect bean stalks from the woods and place them under cover to be ready for hot beds in March. Cut seeds for starting early melons, cucumbers, &c., these may be used for starting seeds which do not like transplanting until the soil be placing the seeds grass downwards, on top of a hot bed, and planting as the earth's decays when the plants are up, the sod may be cut in pieces and put out at its proper time, without disturbing the earth from the roots.

Ridge celery will be in open weather for dismemgration by frost during winter. Give air to cold frames during the mild part of cold days, and expose for hardening in all fine weather.

This is the proper time for gardeners to lay out their work for the next year, so as to be able to follow the best course of sub-successions of crops and not to be hurried in their operations. Have all tools put in proper order, and get such seeds as may not be had on hand for spring use.

Manure Heaps.—If your compost heaps are under sheds and refuse to heat, either turn them in mild weather to encourage fermentation, or make holes in the top of the heap with a crow-bar, and pour in large quantities of boiling water or boiling spent lye. The covering up of a few heated bricks in a manure heap, will often engender fermentation, or the burying of a lump of unslacked lime in a compost heap, will cause fermentation, from the amount of latent heat rendered present during the slacking of the lime. If a compost is dry, add water and the mass will soon be in fair heat, indeed, the pile should never be too dry, or the contents will fire fog, and then much of its value will be dissipated.

Flower Garden.—Salt the paths to prevent spring growths. Attend to protecting all tender shrubs which may have been neglected last month.—Working Farmer.

Apples as an Article of Food.

The importance of apples as food, has not hitherto been sufficiently enumated in this country nor understood. Beside s contributing a large proportion of sugar, mucilage, and other nutritive matter, to the form of food, they contain each a fine combination of vegetable acids, extractive substances, and aromatic principles, with the nutritive matter, so as to act powerfully in the capacity of refrigerents tonics and anti septics, and when freely used at the season of ripeness, by rural laborers and others, "they prevent debility, strengthen digestion, correct the putrefactive tendencies of animal substances food, avert scurvy, and probably maintain and strengthen the powers of productive labor."

The operators of Cornwall, in England, consider ripe apples nearly as nourishing as bread, and more so than potatoes. In the year of 1801, a year of scarcity, apples, instead of being converted into cider, were sold to the poor, and the laborers accorted that they could stand their work on boiled apples without meat; whereas, a potatoe diet required either meat or fish.

The French and Germans use apples extensively; indeed, it is rare that they sit down in the rural districts, without them in some shape or other, even at the best tables. The laborers and mechanics depend on them, to a great extent, as an article of food, and frequently dine on sliced apples and bread. Stewed with rice, red cabbage, carrots, or by themselves, with a little sugar and milk, they make both a pleasant and nutritious dish.—Boston Mike Journal.

ADOLPH'S DUEL WITH CLAY.

tend; after what has occurred, I would have harmed you for a thousand ded this affair. None but the irritable will believe, after what passed the field, that Randolph had any malice motive in the words that fell from him the floor of the Senate. Had a bit thirsty spirit burned in his bosom, best shot in Virginia' would not have petted this opportunity to escape of love his weapon at the breast of an old whose ponderous blows he had felt for years, and whose political opinions considered so dangerous to the country. to true character of the man whose when he declared his intention not to a hair of Mr. Clay's head—and a of sensibility came over him at the of his forlorn condition. Mr. Clay his wife and children to mourn his loss; there was not one to shed a tear over grave. He knew the safety of his sary—but with the immediate prospect death before him, the sublime ans of the godlike Milton attuned his to soften influences; and the cords fection so long silent and rusted by chilling breath of a cold world, awakened by the echoes of long past memories, vibrated a sweet, though mournful ody, that mingled its harmonious notes the divine song of a poet:

"How mournfully sweet are the echoes that start
In Memory's pay an old tune on the heart."

ohn Randolph was not understood.—My who professed to know him, and considered themselves his friends, could ne imprehend "the hair-trigger" sensibility of the man.

few days after this affair, "Friday morning, April 14, 1826, he wrote thus to friend, Dr. Brockenbrough:

"I cannot write—I tried yesterday to ver your letter, but I could not do it pon Cloked. The hysteria passio of old Lear came over me. I left a letter you I dreaso of the worst. It now on my mantel-piece. Perhaps you one time or other, see it. I am a fool. I am all but friendless. Only ve been being overkowne Sir on throw me. But in begins to understand to love me. Nothing has stood in his s. Not he in his pats. Had I suited it, he would have gone with me, as first I. In that case I should not have dated the Laws of Virginia. It was not intention to do so—and——— ve accident, honorable, devoted to my se, but obtuse, wanted tact. I am a ist—on no one occasion of my life have been in extremity, that they, to om my heart yearned and turned for aid ot last for comfort, have not appeared ld aloof from me. I say appeared—assure I that it was appearance, only, I don't instances, on the part of the two es in Virginia, who shared highest in confidence and regard.—But when a n even goes home from the strife and coof this wicked world, and its vile and ful inhabitants, it is then that a certain of voice—an averted look—or even the sweet austere composure of our first mother, cuts him to the heart in the recognition of the wife of his bosom. The words are nothing—the countenance and the tone of voice, the low ensemble, everything."

A Breach of Promise Case.—A charming business like young milliner, who had been in the habit of tripping into a bank for her small change, made it a visit the other day, and says: "Good morning, Mr. Cashier, I have come for five dollars worth of your small change again."

"I am sorry to say, Miss——that we cannot accommodate you," was the reply.

"But here is your memorandum to pay on demand,"

"I cannot help that,"

"Then you break your promise, do you?"

"Certainly"

"And with impunity?"

"To be sure, our charter allows it."

"Allows you to make as many promises as you please, and break them when you please?"

"It may be so construed."

"Why so?"

"Because I had made a promise—not a promise to pay a five dollar note, which I would blush to break; but a promise of my very self to one I do not love."

"Why don't you break it then?"

"Ah, Mr Cashier there's the rub. Unlike your bank, I have no charter, and should be sued for breach of promise, and heavily fined.—Chicago Democrat.

Extraordinary Curiosities.—A Mr. S. B. Knox has brought to Boston, a boy and girl of the Knoxs, the tribe of an almost extinct race of Central America. They are described in the papers of that city as most singular creatures. The boy is thirty-two inches in height, and weighs sixteen pounds, and about ten years of age. The girl is twenty-eight inches in height, weighs fourteen pounds, and is supposed to be about eight years of age. Their hands are not longer than a new born infant's, and they are almost destitute of foreheads, while their noses are finely developed—straight and long, and project at a well defined angel. Their eyes are full, dark and lustrous. Their heads are covered with strong dark hair which descends forward nearly to the eye brows. The face is very sharp, the upper lip projecting, and the chin receding in a corresponding degree.

Notwithstanding the almost entire absence of forhead, there is not in the profile view the least resemblance to belong to the surviving remnant of priesthood, called Kanzes which by constant intermarriage within its own caste, has dwindled down to a few individuals, diminutive in stature, and imbecile in intellect. Their heads and faces resemble exactly the figures on the bas relief of the temple ruins described in Stevens, Central America. They are orphans, and, at the close of a war between two of the Aztec tribes, fell into the hands of a traveller named Hammond. They are lively, playful and affectionate, but all attempts to teach them a word of English have thus far been unsuccessful; they occasionally utter a few gibber rian sounds.

Unpopular Personages.—A fat man in an omnibus, a tall man in a crowd, and a short man on parade.

Independent Man.—A wood sawyer, a philosopher with no coat at his back, a turn coat.

The People's Friend!

T. T. PONDS, of Ithaca, N. Y.

PAIN DESTROYER AND HEALING EXTRACT.—An Extract from the shrub called Witch-hazel, so purely from that with the exception of a little Alcohol which it will cure all local pain and inflammations, old sores, fresh wounds and bruises, Piles, and all diseases of the bowels of a chronic nature, tooth-ache, ear-ache and in fact every pain to which the flesh is heir to.

It is truly what it pretends to be, the People's Friend. Providence has scattered along the rugged paths of life many blessings for our comfort, and among the number of every body's house their dry and cannot may they be called—plants of the People?

One word here to point out what has caused it soon by the name of Pond's has manufactured and offered for sale a spurious article called the Genuine Extract—which would be correct of the name—as the word Genuine is the same as pure as water while the counterfeit article is impure—hence the public are cautioned against it.

None genuine but those marked Ponds' on the wrapper.

VAUGHN'S
LITHONTRIPTIC MIXTURE!

Large Bottles—Only One Dollar.

The Proprietor of the Great American Remedy "Vaughn's Vegetable Lithontriptic Mixture," induced by the urgent solicitations of his Agents, throughout the United States and Canada, has now

Reduced the Price of his popular and well known article; and from this date, henceforth, he will put up but one size only,—he quart bottles—the retail price will be

ONE DOLLAR.

The public may rest assured that the character of the Medicine, its strength, and curative properties will remain unchanged, and the same care will be bestowed in preparing it as heretofore.

At the present low, under its reduced price, will be purchased by those who have not hitherto made the remedy an acquaintance with its virtues, the proprietor would feel encouraged that merits are to be classed with the vast mass of "Remedies of the day." It claims for itself a greater healing power, in all diseases, than any other preparation now before the world, and has sustained itself for eight years by its superior powers of action, and will continue to do so, unassisted, though the price of any other article in the market.

Notice particularly, the article acts with great healing power and certainty, upon the

and all other organs, upon the proper action of which life and health depend.

This medicine has a purifying action as a remedy for

Dropsy and Gravel,

and all diseases of that nature. It may be relied upon when the intelligent physician has exhausted his talent,—and for those distressing diseases, more especially Diabetes, the proprietor would earnestly and honestly recommend it. At its present low price it is obtained by all, and the trial will prove the article to be the Cheapest Medicine in the World!

☞ Please ask for pamphlets — the cost is given there, and contains over sixteen pages of receipts, (in addition to full directions for the use of the Medicine) which will save many dollars per year to persons at housekeepers.

These receipts are considered to make the book of great value, aside from its character as an advertising medium for the medicine, the testimony in favor of which, in the form of letters from all parts of the country, may be relied upon.

☞ Vaughn's Vegetable Lithontriptic Mixture—the Great American Remedy, now for sale in quart bottles at $1 each, small bottles at 50 cts each No small bottles will be issued after the present stock is disposed of.
