Great Fire in New York.

NEW YORK, April 11.

At about one o'clock this morning the store No. 180 Broadway occupied by Hudson & Robertson was discovered to be on fire. The flames spred rapidly and the building was entirely destroyed. Cooper's gun and pistol shop, adjoining then took fire, but was not destroyed. All the gunpowder in it had fortunately been removed. Howard,s Hotel was in great peril, and a panic arose among the inmates who pitched baggage and furniture into the street in great confusion. At about two o'clock the house adjoining next the corner of John street which had taken fire fell with a tremendous crash creating great consternation and alarm.

The property destroyed was the store in which the fire originated the next house, occupied by J. D. Chevalier as a cutlery establishment, and the house adjoining that of Mr. Chevalier on the corner of John street and Broadway and No. 4 John street occupied by Mr. Gambride, engraver.

Messrs. Hudson & Robertson saved their books papers and money. Their loss is estimated at $120,000. Insured for $100-000 on stock and $20,000 on the building.

Fifty rooms in Howard House were more or less damaged. Insured for $20,000.

Ira Todd hatter was insured for $1000 in the Equitable and Cooper Ganner, $5000 in the North River.

Underhill's Millinery store in John street was insured for $7,500.

Extraordinary Religious Excitement at Milwaukee.

Last Sunday evening, the Rev. Mr. Leahey the Monk of Latrappe was advertised to lecture at the Methodist Church. A very large crowd assembled, about a third of them females. He had not spoken five minutes when there was a rush at the door and a, gang of men came in armed with clubs and they tore off the rails from the pews and laid about them with great violence several persons were struck on the head and badly injured—the scene was one of the wildest confusion—pews were torn down chandeliers smashed, and the shouts of the rioters and screams of the women were fearful. The audience gradually got out of the windows and doors, some few persons stood around the speaker and protected him. The Mayor commanded peace and promised that Mr. Leahey should leave the town in the morning. The crowd did not disperse till a late hour and many persons followed the preacher and his escort to a hotel breaking with brickbats some of the windows. The city is in a state of great excitement. A meeting has been held. The Catholic priest published a notice calling on the ir people to keep away from the meeting.

Important Decision.

In the Philadelpha Court of Quarter Sessions on Saturday, the following decision was rendered by Judge Parsons:

The Right of an Occupation of a House to Compel Persons to Leave the Ground in Front of it.

On Saturday David Vondersmith was before the Court on a writ of habeas corpus. He was charged with an assault and battery on Andrew Kee, the keeper of a hackney carriage. The facts are that Kee was standing in front of the United States Hotel, when he was ordered to leave by Mr Snider. The latter called the defendant to arrest him which he did and took him to the Mayor's office. It was for this that the prosecution was brought. Kee alleged that he went to the hotel to look for a gentleman who owed him money, and that he was not inside of the hotel. Judge Parsons said he would decide the question presented upon first principles so that the rights of parties should be clearly understood. Every man owns the ground in front of his house. He has given to the public a right to pass and repass over it but in all other respects it is as much his property as any other part of the premises. No one has a right to stand or carry on any business in front of any man's house and if he is thus annoyed and notifies the party to leave and he don,t, he has a perfect right to use sufficient force to compel the offender to go. If such was not the law a person might set up a fish stand under another's parlor windop or any other obnoxious business. A man keeps a public house to entertain strngers and travellers, and no one has a right to come about his premises to interfere with his customers or guests. It has been held by the Court that men and boys have no right to collect at the corners of streets. At the last term of the Court, in a case where arrests were made by an officer of persons who had collected around a house where an unfortunate female who made a noise resided it was laid down that the police had a right to disperse them. When Kee was told to leave the place by the proprietor he ought to have done so. His refusal to go gave the proprietor a right to take him by the collar and put him off the pavement or call a public officer to do it which was the wiser course. Vondersmith having done nothing but his duty he was accordingly discharged from custody.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE.—This was, perhaps, one of the wisest sayings ever recorded from human lips, not excepting those even of Plato, Socrates, Solon, or Lycurgus; it was the saying of a modern French statesman, who, having observed the restless desire of the people of that country for change and novelty, and noted the pernicious consequences that so often resulted from it, addressed to them this celebrated sentiment—"Let well enough alone." For, when the man who wanted to be better, when he was in health, took physic—he died! This is too often the case with communities. We are now commercially and financially speaking, in "good health." Every house is occupied—every store has a tenant—money is cheap and plenty, and industry enjoys its reward. Let our political "doctors" at Harrisburg, therefore, think of this, before they treat a sound body as if it was dying of "the plague." Think more than once before you pass laws to tax industry, or bestow a bonus on trade, which thrives most under free competition when capital can seek the most productive investment, independent of the shackles of legislation. Trade, to be prosperous, only asks to "let alone."

Lawyers in the United States.

Our people must be very fond of law, notwithstanding it is so expensive for we see by Livingston's Law Magazine that there are twenty-one thousand nine hundred and seventy-nine lawyers in the country, or about one to every eleven hundred inhabitants male and female, old and young, black and white, Jew and Gentile, bond and free. Philadelphia county has four hundred and forty-seven lawyers or nearly one to every nine hundred persons. Pennsylvania has over seventeen hundred. If our own State is favored with a large amount, New York is more than doubly blessed for it has over four thousand three hundred lawyers. Mr. Livingston estimates that each lawyers' practice has an average income of $1500. This would make the aggregate cost of law in the United States reach the enormous sum of nearly thirty-three millions of dollars. If this is not paying too dear for the whistle generally all the client gets after the fees are fobbed we know not what is. A year's war could scarcely cost more money, and probably not prove more ruinous to private fortune. A few years back and the expense of the General Goverament with all its various officers and retainers was not so great as this amount.

RE-VACCINATION.—Medical men are very often asked if one vaccination is sufficient to protect the system through life from small pox—or how often it is necessary to have it operated. The late Dr. Fisher of Boston, for a long time gave attention to the subject, and in January last published with others, the following propositions:

1. That one single and perfect vaccinations does not, for all time, in all cases, deprive the system of its susceptibility of variolous diseases.

2. That one or more re-vaccinations do; and that consequently a physician should recommend re-vaccination, when questioned as to its necessity.

3. The system is protected from variolous contagion when it is no longer susceptible of vaccine influence as tested by re-vaccination.

Every person, therefore, who would be fully protected from small pox, should be not only once vaccinated, but should have the operation repeted one or more times, or until the system ceases to be affected by the virus.
