heart was bowed, for a shadowy hand ad plucked a flower from our household band tep was missed, and a smile had flown, roce was hushed with its gentle tone; ad my spirit mourned at the lesson taught; and I could but weep at the saddening thought. ow decting all are the spells of earth, The gush of love, and the glow of mirth; her vanish soon as a meteor's gleam, the sanny glow of a morning dream. And I wandered forth with a dewy eye Then the stars were out in the bended sky, and I bowed my soul in the silence there, nd breathed in my sadness a simple prayer o Him who bindsup the broken heart hat he would the balm of his grace impart. Oh, then my thoughts rose up from the gloon the mournful pall, and the shadowy tomb, nd a vision broke over my fevered brain hat will never depart :-- and a melting strain strange, sweet melody fell on my ear ant breathed the tones of a brighter sphere

e blended song of an angel band : Come up hither-child of sorrow, Love not thus life's weary chain ; Why remain where each to-morrow Brings but toil and grief and pain Darth's delight's are few and fleeting, Sadness dames the fire of joy, Parting mars each earthly meeting, ed thus it came from their far-off land.

Hope but lares thee to destroy Come up hither-weary mortals Gladly leave life's darksome way For these high and radiant portals Open on eternal day. Here is beauty such as never Dawned upon a mortal eye And its rays so bright and pearly

Shine not, like the earth's to die.

Come up hither-Seraph music With its soft, ecstatic tone Circles in its sweetness ever Roand the great eternal throne. Love is here no transient rainbow, Bright a moment ere it fadeloy is not that sudden fire-light Quickly lost in deepest shade.

Come up hither-here no fever Wastes the weary frame away, lod-ep, lingering grief that ever Claus the spirit for its prev. No sad weening-and no yearning For some brighter, happier clime: No dispairing, and no turning \ Fearful from the after time.

Child of sorrow-come up hither; Love not thus life's weary chain ; Flowers that bloom here never wither, Suring has an eternal reign. Visions bright gleam not upôn us Just to fade in mucky gloom-Blissful scenes are ever round us : Come up hither-mortal, come !

EY GEORGIA MECKLIN. Twas just one year to-day, Mary, An angel-band came down, And here you far away, Mary,

To wear a starry crown ; My heart with grief oppress'd, Mary They'd laid you down to rest, Mary, On your cold, and clayey bed.

Twas in the Autumn-time, Mary, When last we breathed adien; I sought a stranger clime, Mary, A home where all was new. But still an augel-smile, Mary, A brow and cheek of snow Seemed near me all the while, Mary, With eyes of Heavenly glow.

I had a sweet young rose, Mary, Ricked from your favorite tree;
Ricked from your favorite tree;
Below the winter snows, Mary,
Your mother gave it me.
She said it was in 4ruth, Mary,

An emblem of her child. A fitting type of youth, Mary, As fair, as pure, as wild. I watered it each hour, Mary,

I watered it each hour, Mary,
And cherished it with care;
I loved that finy flower, Mary,
For it was passing fair.
But lowly day for day, Mary,
Each petal bowed its head,
I failed all away, Mary,
But still ite fragrance shed.

I thought then of the fears, Mary,
That gloomed your life so brief,
A mether's prayers and tears, Mary,
A father's stifled grief.
Of all within that home Mary,
thor tearfully and meek,
They used each more to grine. Mary

They used each morn to come, Mary, And kiss your pullid cheek. While thus I bent above, Mary,

This flower of early bloom, head a voice of love, Mary, Stal through the misty gloom.

And ser a tide of wees, Mary,

From set that withered rose, Mary,

A tweetess gospel spoke.
