The Only Son. The only boy 'mid a dozen girls Is always a very king-Is aways a real and petted, his will is law. And he rules everything; For his father and mother, with loving eyes Glance over each cherished one, The smile of affection sweetest resis On the darling only son.

Ab! woe to the innocent helpless girls, 'Neath an only brother's sway ; He's always spoiling their funny plans In the most provoking way ; He laughs as they search for their hidden toys And thinks it capital fun-Ab! 'mid the mischiovous race of boys, There's none like an only son!

They must be content with the poores things. Without a word or sigh, For he always claims the sweetest cakes, And the largest piece of pie. They must always bear with a patient grac The mischief he has done, For an adept in rognery and prankfulness

Is the petted only son. He throws their playthings in the fire, And laughs to see them burn ; He puts the cat in his father's boots, And the dog in his mother's churn. But his mischief meets with approving

When its found by whom tis done, For what would be blamed in another child, is praised in an only son.

Pompeii.

The ancient city of Pompeii is plainly indiated by a ridge or mould extending from the base of Vesuvius to its excavated Amphithea tre, which is situated at its eastern extremity Not much, if any, more than one third of the city has been excavated; and most of this was done by the French though the work has been progressing moderately under the Neapolitan Government. The task is Herculean, for the city lies buried under volcanie earth from ten to twenty feet deep, and as the roofs of the buildings were all crushed, the apartments were of course filled with solid earth.

A Happy Home. The first year of married life is a most important era in the history of a man and wife. Generally as it is spent, so is almost all subsequent existence. The wife and husband then assimilate their views and their desires, or clacconjuring up their dislikes, they add fuel to their projudices and animosities for over after-
