that they may be saved from the calamitous consequences that the passage of this bill will impose upon them.

The gentleman from Philadelphia (Mr. Strong) would ridicule the idea of this road being a monopoly, and declares in his judgment, that it would be an 'ornament' to Pennsylvania! Now, Mr. Speaker, I declare it to be one of the most wicked and wholesale monopolies that could be created in that section of the State; and I mean what I say. An 'ornament' indeed! Such an 'ornament' as only would fittingly adorn the great sepulchre that the passage of this bill will rear over the hopes and interests of all that section of the commonwealth. Wherein it is a monopoly, I think I have already demonstrated to the understanding of this House.

Mr. Speaker: Since this discussion commenced, it has been said that individuals have always been warring these 'great interests' and that thereby our resources have not been developed as they might have been—that it is time such a war should cease, and these great projects be allowed to go on in their gigantic career—that on account of this war, Pennsylvania is fifty years behind her sister States in point of internal wealth and greatness. Now, sir I deny the whole charge. It is a libel upon the honest hearted citizens of this Commonwealth, and adds insult to injury. I repeat, sir, the people of Pennsylvania have never been the aggressors upon any fair, manly, and benificent interest. The truth is, sir, these interests, as they are called, have forever been waging a cruel and merciless war upon the rights of the people, as is proposed in the bill now under consideration; and the people, sir, have but carried out the instincts of self protection in opposing to the last those aggressions. They could do no less and be worthy the name of citizens—they could not do less without voluntarily submitting to become slaves.

I know well, sir, that this conflict between the great monetary of the Commonwealth, and the people has been long and often fiercely waged. Such institutions, cold, heartless, soul*less* and artificial as they are, never will give in against their interest till they have accomplished something. They seduce by their blandishments, worry down opposition by constant and unceasing efforts; swerve by their allurements and intimidate by their power.—Their force is concentrated and easily brought to bear. It is money, the power that rules the world; and it is easy to see, in such a contest, where and against whom lie the odds. It is a contest between the bones and sinews of men and gold—glittering, dazzling gold. I say that gold—capital, concentrated and bent on this one object of gain, is the aggressor. It is calculating and exacting—it calls for the pound of flesh and will not be satisfied. Stocks, dividends and per centage, are its idols—the god before which it bows with more than devotee fanaticism. With the air of impudence, unblushing in its demands, it walks into these halls and fills these lobbies with its servile, borers, and calls for a legislated morsel of bone and flesh. It hears no sigh, it heeds no want, it listens to no remonstrances, but with a self-complacent haughtiness, rides over and bears down all individual and natural rights, and would hesitate not, if necessary, to coin dividends from the destruction of souls!

To protect themselves against such a foe, the people must needs be active and vigilant; and if you call it a war on 'great interests,' then do I glory that I have participated in the conflict. I appeal to the Democratic members on this floor, and ask, was the Democracy of Pennsylvania ever so pure, ever so strong and ever so invincible, as when they rallied around the iron-willed old hero of the Hermitage and carried this war of self-defence into the very heart of the monied power of the nation? If you neglect to answer, then let the overshadowing majority that Pennsylvania polled, at his second election, answer for you. There and then, sir, was a verdict of the people recorded on this question, and then and there did the ballot-box thunder. The masses of the country struck for their rights, because they had a leader that would not fly the field. Jackson was incorruptible, and those masses who always mean to be Democratic, and defend their rights, showed that they dare follow where politicians, weak and timid men, faltered and cried out with fear. And in that contest, too, was illustrated the dangerous power that capital, concentrated by the government wields in this country. The press of the nation was corrupted and her men of influence seduced. The whole atmosphere was poisoned with vile anthemas, and the upas breath of slander. Even the knife of the assassin was aimed at the heart of the pure old chief; but Heaven preserved the right and it triumphed, for justice and right will prevail and live—live in the hearts of men—live in the attributes of God—live forever!

In reference to Pennsylvania being behind the age, of her sister States, in the development of her resources, I have a few words to say. I dislike Mr. Speaker, this clap-trap, so frequently and successfully used on this floor, when a stupendous project comes before the House, that seeks to stifle all inquiry by the cry of developing the resources of the State. It has become, sir, in my judgment, a mere ruse, often to hide the most wicked intentions and the most enormous special privileges. I did hope not to hear it in connection with the bill now pending, the hideous features of which, I did not suppose any gentleman would think of covering with so thin and transparent a veil. And I dislike, equally as much, to be pointed to the State of New York, as a model of all that is pure, perfect and worthy of imitation. Why, sir, Pennsylvania, following in the wake of the policy of that great State, years ago was induced to embark in a wild and reckless system of internal improvements, scattering her money like dust into bottomless canals, and lavishing it without stint or measure upon splendid 'tape-worms,' running her credit far beyond the means of paying. And who does not know, that the following out of that policy brought a hurricane of bankruptcy to sweep over the Commonwealth, bowing the plighted faith of our noble old State low in the dust and ashes of repudiation.

This we brought upon us by following the visionary projects of the charlatan financiers of New York, and have now attached to the Government a complicated and unmanageable system of public works, upon which we must yearly squander millions, drawn from the pockets of our people, who groan and labor under the enormous debt which they have induced. I tell you, sir, we have followed our sister States too far already—followed them till we are bound hand and foot by these splendid State dependencies, and our treasury has become an open prey to the vultures of party that feast upon its misfortunes. Let us begin, sir, to act with independence and prudence, heeding the severe lessons of the past. Let us create no more of these splendid dependencies, to rot on the treasure of the people, for history will bear me out in saying that under their guilded surface, heaves an ocean of corruption and wrong.

Mr. Speaker, the signs of the times indicate with unerring certainty an approaching crisis. This mania for railroads and corporate stocks is ominous of ill. People seem infatuated and heedless of the warnings of prudence or the past. Every thing in the commercial world portends the coming of a storm. Shall we leave the people of this good old commonwealth at the mercy of the pitiless blast, or shall we release, especially, to force upon them legislation to encourage and foster the coming ill? Rocks and sands and a treacherous shore lie just ahead! As a representative of the North, I protest again, and again, against any legislation that shall sink the citizens of that section of the State in the general ruin. Is it not sufficient to grant it to those who ask; and will you not let those who remonstrate alone!

Thanking the House for the indulgence and attention shown me, I hold myself responsible for the record this act of my life has made, to the constituency I have the honor to represent on this floor.

THIRTY SECOND CONGRESS
Second Session.

Washington, Feb. 23.

SENATE

The Senate met at the usual hour.

Mr. Hunter of Va., from the committee appointed to wait upon and communicate to General Pierce his election to the Presidency of the United States, reported to the Senate that the committee had performed its duty.

He likewise read a letter of acceptance from Gen. Pierce.

On motion of Mr. Bright, the President of the Senate was directed to appoint a committee to receive the President on the 4th of March and make suitable arrangements for his inauguration.

The Senate then took up the army appropriation bill, and many amendments were considered and adopted.

A debate arose on the proposition to restore the civil superintendency of the United States armories.

HOUSE.

The journal having been read, Mr. Jones, of Tenn., from the Committee selected to wait upon the President elect, and inform him of his election, reported to the House that said committee had fulfilled its duty.

He was followed by Mr. Clingman, of North Carolina, who argued in favor of a settlement of the fishery question first.

Mr. Townsend next addressed the House in defence of the agricultural interests.

On motion, the consideration of the bill for establishment of reciprocity in trade between the United States and Canada, on certain conditions, was then resumed.

Mr. Tuck of New Hampshire, being entitled to the floor, concluded the speech commenced by him yesterday, in favor of the bill.

Feb. 24.

SENATE

Mr. Hunter of Va., reported the post office appropriation bill.

Mr. Davis of Mass., reported a bill to authorize the issue of certificates of register to vessels, in certain cases not now provided for The bill after a short debate was passed.

The Senate then took up and resumed consideration of the Army Appropriation bill.

The amendment authorizing a survey for a Railroad route to California, was discussed at some length.

The amendment discussed was reported this morning from the committee on Roads and Canals, and is in substance the same as that offered yesterday by Mr. Gwin of California, and was ruled out.

Mr. Walker moved an amendment to the amendment offered, the object of which is to extend the principle of the homestead bill to alternate sections on the line of the route Surrogate.

The amendment, after some discussion, was overruled.

Mr. Walker immediately offered the same amendment in another form, which was discussed at some length.

HOUSE.

The House met at the usual hour, and after going through the usual routine business; took up and passed the Senate bill to regulate the terms of the District Courts of Iowa.

On motion, the House resumed the consideration of the Canadian Reciprocity bill.

Mr. Townsend spoke at some length in favor of its passage.

Mr. Stuart moved the previous question.

Mr. Orr moved that it be laid on the table.

The yeas and nays were taken.

Motion lost by yeas 68, nays 111.

The previous question was then seconded, and without any further action, the House went into committee of the whole on the Indian Appropriation bill, and debated a number of amendments.

Feb. 25.

SENATE.

After the usual opening business, Mr. Bradbury, of Maine, introduced a bill to create a court of justice, to try all claims that may be presented against the government.

Messrs. Moore & Huscall's patent, for a reaping and threashing machine.

Mr. James, of Rhode Island, read a speech of some length against granting the extension.

Finally the bill was referred back to the committee.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the Army appropriation bill, and Mr. Walker's amendment was debated. The amendment provides for the appropriation of $150,000 for a survey by the United States Engineer, who shall select, locate and mark the most practicable route for a railroad connecting the valley of the Mississippi river and the eastern limits of California.

The President of the United States to select whichever route may be best, and as soon as practicable after the said road shall have been located, there shall be surveyed six townships wide of the public lands on each side of said road, throughout its whole extent, every alternate section of which shall be granted to each person who is the head of a family, who shall settle upon and cultivate the same; and the remaining alternate sections shall be held and disposed of by the United States for the ultimate construction of said road.

Finally, Mr. Walker's amendment was lost and Mr. Chase's original amendment for the survey of a route to the Pacific was adopted by a vote of 31 yeas to 16 nays.

HOUSE.

The House met at 11 o'clock, and after reading the journal, &c., went into Committee of the whole on the Naval bill.

Mr. Stanton spoke at some length of the necessity of reform in the navy.

Mr. Bowne followed on the same subject.

☞ Ex-President Van Buren, it is said, will start for Europe next month. He will accompany his son, Martin Van Buren, Jr., whose impaired health, it is thought, will be benefitted by the European tour. Mr. Van Buren, himself, retains all his vigor of mind and body, and his constitutional cheerfulness. The Ex-President will be the only one of the Chief Magistrates of the Republic, we believe, that ever visited Europe after his retirement from office.

POST SCRIPT

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention was organized at Harrisburg, on Tuesday last. Wm. L. Hirst Esq., was elected President. On the 6th Ballot, THOMAS H. FORSYTH was nominated Canal Commissioner. Ephram Banks was nominated Auditor General by acclamation.—No nomination of Surveyor General on that day.

Our Legislature adjourned over from Tuesday to Monday next.

ASYLUM FOR DECAYED EDITORS.—The Boston Mail says there is a project on foot in that city, to establish an Asylum for decayed Editors. The plan seems to embrace the erection of an elegant retreat, where once prosperous, but now poor Editors, may retire and spend their old age in elegant comfort, surrounded by the enjoyment to be derived from books, statuary, music, exchanges, &c., and from whence he may saunter forth, dressed like a gentleman, to mingle at pleasure with his successors in the sanctum. The mail learns that several applications have already been made for situations.

☞ Spirit Rapping and Lunacy have well nigh become convertible terms. According to the report of the superintendant of the Ohio State Lunatic Asylum, there are now in that institution twenty-six victims of the rapping mania—half males and half females.

TO COUNTRY DEALERS.

Silks and Fancy Dry Goods.

NICHOLSON & WRIGHT, IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS
Of Silks and Fancy Dry Goods.

HAVING removed from 54 Cedar street, to the New Astor building, 361 Broadway, four doors west of Broadway, would invite the attention of dealers in distant cities and towns to a very extensive and rich stock of silks and fancy dry goods, consisting of Ribbons, Laces, Embroideries, Dress Trimmings, White Goods, Gloves, Silks, Delaines, Shawls, Parasols, Millinery Articles, &c.

An examination of our Goods and prices, will we think, convince country dealers that we can offer them fully as advantageous terms as any house in New York—if not better. We pay particular attention to the Auction sales, and if goods are selling at less prices than they can be imported—as is sometimes the case—we shall see that our customers shall realize all the benefit accruing from such sales. We are at all times willing to exhibit our stock to buyers, whether they purchase or not; we do not consider it any trouble to show our goods.

☞ Cash and close time purchasers are especially invited to give us a call. From our facilities we are convinced that we can sell them at such rates as must prove satisfactory. NICOLSON & WRIGHT.

A World of WONDERFUL THINGS.

Attend! ye dwellers 'neath the sun!
Behold the wonders Art hath done!
We talk by lightning, ride by steam,
And paint by Sol's eternal beam!

But without stopping to enumerate the many benefits derived from the 'wire' and the 'track,' we would call attention to the advantage of procuring one or more of those beautiful which are taken at the Odd Fellows' Hall, by the aid of 'heaven's own sunlight' and W. B. Deans, the Artist.

He has just returned from the city, not with his 'head full of knowledge,' but with a new and interesting supply of plates and cases, gold and plated lockets, keys, etc. Among his latest styles of cases are the Madame Sontag, Fancy, Turtle Shell, and Ladies' Own—the most splendid and attractive patterns ever offered to the public.—Call and see! Admission free.
