

Inauguration of Gen. Pierce.

The following proceedings of the Inauguration we take from the New York Herald, publishing the Order of the Procession, and some occurrences which are too lengthy for our columns:

The procession commenced passing the National Hotel 20 minutes before 1, at a brisk pace, and had passed at 1, being about a mile long. It commenced stowing again, which curtailed the civic portion of the procession.

The procession reached the Capitol at one o'clock, and the President, with officials, passed into the Senate chamber. The President and President elect took their seats in front of the Secretary's table, with the Committee of Arrangements on their right and left.

The Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court were seated in front of the eastern lobby. The diplomatic corps were outside the bar, on the right of the principal entrance, and the heads of departments and Governors on the left.

At half past one o'clock, all being arranged, the oath of office was administered to Gen. Pierce by the Chief Justice, as follows: I do solemnly affirm that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will defend the Constitution of the United States.

It will be remarked that Gen. Pierce, in taking the oath, did not, as has been ordinarily the custom, say "I solemnly swear," but "I solemnly affirm;" and instead of kissing the book in Southern fashion, he raised his right hand and held it aloft until the pledge was read.

The whole of the ceremony was admirably carried out. Through the Senate chamber, Mr. Fillmore, turning off through a side door, was momentarily separated from Gen. Pierce, when the latter said, "this way let us work right in," and in they went.

Immediately before the address, when Gen. Pierce took the oath, his head uncovered, and raising one hand to Heaven, while the other on the Holy Book, the spectators also uncovered, even in the snow that was falling at the time, and many of them lifted up their hands as if in act of the most fervent devotion. It was a solemn scene.

The address, which President delivered, unalteredly from memory, and with great effect, was received with great enthusiasm by the vast multitude, particularly those portions of it that asserted the Monroe doctrine, the protection of American citizens abroad, the firm adherence of the President to the compromise measures, and his determination to carry out the fugitive slave law.

Democratic State Convention.

HARRISBURG, March 1.—The Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania to nominate candidates for the offices of Canal Commissioner, Auditor General, and Surveyor General of the State, assembled to-day at 12 o'clock, in the hall of the House of Representatives, pursuant to the call of the State Central Committee.

The attendance of the Delegates was very full, and the strong interest felt by the friends of the rival candidates, especially for the office of Canal Commissioner, caused much excitement to prevail.

The Convention was called to order at 12 o'clock, amid much noise and tumult, by Mr. Wise, who acted as the Arnold Plumer, of Venango, took the Chair.

Mr. Wise put the question "and cries of order," "order," and great confusion. Mr. Fraley, of Schuylkill, moved to amend the nomination, and the Hon. John Cessna, of Bedford, took the Chair.

The utmost confusion prevailed for some time, and both Mr. Plumer and Mr. Cessna were conducted by their friends to the Speaker's Chair.

Mr. Cessna after some time, and when order had been restored, explained the vote for Plumer, and the scene which had been enacted, and besought all to set with calmness and decorum. To settle the difficulty as to the choice of a Chairman, he proposed the appointment of tellers to count the votes.

The motion was put and agreed to, and tellers were named, and the vote for Plumer was 66, and for Cessna 61 votes.

Mr. Plumer thereupon took the chair, and in a brief speech thanked the delegates for the compliment, preferred, at the same time alluding to the important duties the Convention had to perform.

The Convention then adjourned until 3 o'clock. AFTERNOON SESSION. The Convention re-assembled at 3 o'clock, when the Hon. J. M. Porter, of Northampton, chairman of the Committee, appointed to select officers for the permanent organization of the Convention, reported that they had selected Wm. H. Hunt, of Philadelphia, as President.
