Washington News and Gossip.

The New York Herald's Washington correspondent learns at the State Department that Mr Buchanan has solicited the Hon John Appleton, a prominent ex-member of Congress from Maine, to accept the position of Secretary of Legation at London,

Solon Borland, of Arkansas, has been appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Central America.

Major Cantwell and Robert Strange have withdrawn their applications for the district attorneyship of North Carolina, and the President has decided to make the appointment from the western part of the State.

Charles S. Frailey, of Ohio, has been appointed Chief Clerk of the Land Office, vice Cabell, removed.

The Washington Union denies the reported ill health of the President, and says that his health decidedly has improved, and that he has gained, both in strength and weight, since the inauguration.

John Van Buren and a delegation of "soft shells" from Albany, are in Washington, to prevent, it is said, the appointment of Mr. Johnson of the Argus, to the Postmastership at Albany.

The Hon. A. G. Penn, of Louisana, has been appointed Commissioner for the construction of the magnificent new custom house now being built in New Orleans, which, when completed, will be the most elaborate and extensive structure of the kind belonging to the government of the United States.

Major Stevens has nearly completed his arrangements for the survey of a northern route for the Pacific Railroad. Lieut. Ducan, with a party of sixteen, have been sent to Oregon, via the Isthmus, to start from Pugets Sound and meet the exploring party in the mountains Another of the party has been sometime in Canada collecting information from the Hudson Bay Company, &c.

It is said that the Hon. Thomas Corwin, on his return from his approaching continental tour, designs locating, for the practice of his profession, in Louisville, Ky., having made arrangements to reside in the immediate vicinity of that city.

Mr. Kennedy, late Superintendent of the Census, has been appointed member of the Royal Statistical Commission of Belgium, having previously been chosen corresponding member of the French Academy.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 30—Midnight.

We have the following nominations so confidently spoken of this evening by reliable men, that we shall speak of them as if definitely agreed upon:

Gen. Dix to France, to say nothing of Gov. Seymour to Russia, gives the soft shells the preponderence in the affections of the administration. But Gen. Pierce acts upon the doctrine that, prima facie, all are good democrats that united in his election, and on the Baltimore platform. That is his chart, and he does not go behind the record to inquire whether this or that man was a backslider in 1848, or a whig in 1840.

James Gadsden, of South Carolina, for Mexico, will make the abolitionists stir their stumps. He was a secessionest in 1850—1 on the negro question. He it was who suggested the plan of establishing a footing for the South in California, by carrying a good stock of slaves into the southern section of that country, so well adapted to slave labor, and while he is disposed to the most generous policy with Mexico, he is not the man, should Santa Anna desire to sell the Northern Mexican frontier, who will decline to buy for fear of another agitation of the slavery question.

There have been a variety of other matters upon the carpet within the last two days, with regard to Mexico. We apprehend that Gen. Pierce will abide by our treaty stipulations, and repudiate any fillibustering.

VOLUNTEER.

Departure of ex-President Van Buren for Europe.

Our worthy ex-President, Martin Van Buren, took his departure for Europe at 12 o'clock yesterday, in the steamship Arctic.' For an hour before the vessel left the dock, a large number of his personal friends were assembled on board to bid him a hearty farewell and safe return to his native land. Among his numerous friends and acquaintances were Benjamin F. Butler, Dudley Field, and several of his old political associates and adherents. Although occasionally a shade of regret would pass over his face at the thought of le aving behind him, even during his short absence, so many tried friends, he was generally cheerful, and appeared to be in excellent health, talking to those around him in his usual self-possession and easy manner. Mr. Van Buren is accompanied by his son Martin, whose ill health has been the chief cause of his present trip to Europe. He has, however, for some years past, entertained a strong desire to see the Continent and visit the principal cities and other places of note. Wherever he travels he will attract no little attention as the first President of the United States who has visited Europe, and we have no doubt that he will receive a cordial welcome. Mr. Van Buren, it will be remembered, visited England in an official capacity, having been appointed ambassador to London by General Jackson; but as his appointment was defeated in the Senate by the casting vote of Mr Calhoun, who was then Vice President he was recalled. This, however, was before his election to to the chief magistracy. Although in his seventy-first year, he appears as vigorous as a man of fifty. Amid all the toils and turmoils incident to a political life, before which a man of ordinary powers would have succumbed at the age of forty, he has preserved his health and faculties to a remarkable degree.

MRS. GEN. CASS.—The late Mrs. Cass was a daughter of Dr. Joseph Spencer, of Connecticut, who removed to Lansingburg, New York, in 1786, at which place she was born September 27, 1778. Five years afterwards she removed with her father's family to Wood county, Virginia, where she resided until she was married to General Cass in 1806. After a residence of about eight years in Muskingum county, Ohio, she came to reside in Michigan, then a territory, over which General Cass had been appointed Governor, in 1815. From that time until the year 1832, she resided in Detroit, when she left to make her residence at Washington with her husband, who had been appointed Secretary of War under Gen. Jackson. In the year 1836 she accompanied Gen. Cass to Paris, where she resided during the continuance of his term as Minister to France, returning to Detroit somewhat in advance of him in 1841.

Movements of Printers.

Pittsburg, May 2, 1853.

The National Typographical Union met this morning in our City Hall. There was a large attendance, and nine States were represented.

The following subordinate Unions were added to the Charter:—Rochester, No. 15; Chicago, No. 16; New Orleans, No. 17.

An application from the Cooperative Union of New York city was presented. Their delegate, Mr. Smith, was admitted temporarily in the convention. After a long discussion, a resolution was offered that, owing to circumstances existing in New York city, and not in other localities, the Union deem it expedient that two organizations should exist there, subordinate to the National Union. A warm discussion followed, and pending a motion to amend, by granting the application of the Cooperative Union, the convention adjourned till 3 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Upon reassembling the application to charter the New York Cooperative Union was rejected Mr. Smith made an able defence for the Cooperative Union, as composing the mass of the printers in New York, and enjoying the confidence of employers.

On motion, Mr Smith was admitted unanimously to a seat during the convention, without the privilege of voting.

After the appointment of several committees the Union adjourned until to-morrow, at 9 A. M.

The National Union will be in session some days.

A ball is to be given the Union on Wednesday night, by the Pittsburg Union.

Boston Printers on a Strike.

May 2. 1853.

A meeting of Journeymen printers, employed on the morning newspapers, was held on Saturday evening, at which it was resolved to demand 5 cents 1000 ems advance, and if not conceeded, to strike this morning. Several of the papers refuse to allow the advance, and the printers are now on a strike.

P. S.—with one or two expectations, the morning papers have acceded to the demands of the journeymen, and the lattor have gone to work.

Strike in Baltimore and an Employer Struck.

May 2, 1853.

The hands in Sherwood's printing office struck to day, and afterwards attacked Mr. Sherwood, forcing him to fly for protection.

Spring to be Executed—Illness of Judge Gibson.

Philadelphia, May 2, 1853.

The warrant of the Governor for the execution of Arthur Spring on the 10th of June, was read to the condemned man this afternoon by Sheriff Allen. He manifested not the slightest concern, and professed his readiness to die immediately, but assoverated his innocence and the guilt of his son.

Judge Gibson, who is lying seriously ill at the United States Hotel, in this city, is not expected to survive through the night.

Landing of Mrs. Stow in Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, April 14, 1852.

The other Sabbath morning, while leaving my hotel in Liverpool, I heard three distinct, extra, well-defined coups de canon, proceeding I was informed by James, the waiter, from the guns of the steamship Canada. James added that Missus 'Arriet Beecham Sto' was expected on the steamer, and then there would be "a-much to do."

Leaving the Hotel, I had time, while sauntering towards towards the docks, to observe the crowds of church-going citizens, and listen to the hallowed tones of the church-going bell. Need it be said to those who have heard Liverpool chimes, that this tintinnabulation carried me back to the woods of Maine, made musical at eventide by the bells of home-going kine? So striking was the similitude of sounds that my feelings overpowered me. I drew forth my handkerchief and—blew my nose; it would have been unmanly to have wept.

On arriving at floating platform called the landing stage, of which the Liverpuddlians are justly proud, I found myself in a crowd of six or seven hundred people, mostly, by their appearance, clerks in cotton offices, and all gazing towards the river. The cynosure of all eyes was the "Satelite" river steamer, bringing the mails and Mrs. H. B. Stowe from the Canada. Suddenly the Satelite changed her course to another landing place, and then began a race of the crowd such as "our insane artist" might picture from the rear the retreat of the ten thousand Greeks—

"coat tails and hair
Streamed like twin meteors on the troubled air!"

Eh bien! soon the Satellite makes fast to the stairs—everybody stands on tiptoe on everybody else's toes, and all necks are elongated to look over everybody else's hat. Being as you know, rather short and squabby, I was under the necessity of climbing up a passive individual in front to obtain a view of the ceremony. Then burst on my enraptured vision [see Petrarch,] an apparition of the closely veiled bonnet of a lady's head, which we took to be Mrs. Stowe, buried among a pile of mail bags. Attending on the lady's bonnet was a gentleman of strikingly intellectual aspect who was, of course, husband of the lady in the bonnet, although the crowd insisted that he was Sam Slick, of Blue-nos an celebrity, and who was known to be Mrs. Stowe's fellow passenger. In course of time the balance of the lady and gentleman was extricated, and proceded arm in arm along a lane obligingly opened by the people to a fly—Jacob's, one horse, two-wheeled, drab lining, copy of regulations inside, fare one shilling a mile from the stand, horse brown, and off leg with white stocking. We mention these particulars for the use of the historian. Mrs. Stowe having been carefully put inside by the driver, the attention of the British public was next directed to her "plunder," which duly appeared in the shape of a trunk, with the inscription H. B. S. Thus assored that the "veiled lady" was no other than the authoress of Uncle Tom and owner of the trunk, what a shout rent the air! It was a true John Bull "Hip, hip, hur!" with the "rah" cut off, being Sunday. Indeed, some hearty individuals, forgetful of the sacred day, thrust their hands through the door and windows of the fly to give the illustrious strangers the grasp of hospitable welcome to that shore where no Uncle Tom can live, (a fact that); and had time permitted I have no doubt the more hospitable would have treated the Rev. Beecher with beer. But before any one had presence of mind to make the proposal, the jarvey hit the brown horse with the white stocking a lick on the near side of his head, the animal kicked out behind, and the Stowe family departed for the hospitable family of Mr. Crupper. Another cheer split the Sabbath atmosphere, and the multitude dispersed to their devotions.

New Railroads in Pennsylvania.

In the immense list o acts passed at the late session of the legislature of Pennsylvania, we find the titles of no less than thirty-one newly incorporated railroad companies.

In publishing a list of them, the Philadelphia Bulletin remarks:

"We have no means of ascertaining the lengths of all these projected railroads, but it would not be far out of the way to say that they average forty miles apiece. This makes 1240 miles of railroad, and estimating the cost at say $25,000 a mile, we have the moderate sum of $31,000,000 to be expended on entirely new works. Then there are some hundreds of miles now in progress, which will consume many additional millions. Besides all these, the list of legislative acts embrace a great many supplements to former charters authorizing corporations to subscribe to stock of others, and explaining the details of others. All these, with the railroads now in process of construction, will call for an outlay of some twenty millions of dollars; so that we speak moderately when we estimate the amount the people of Pennsylvania are called upon to expend in railroads, within a few years, at about fifty millions of dollars. It can scarcely be less than this, and may be far more, but this will do for the present. In the meantime we may ask, where is the money to come from?
