store-house, the honey comb. Another error is, that the bee collects pol len from the flowers accidentally while, it is in search of honey. Quite contrary is the fact. The bee when in search of nectar, or honey, as it is improperly called, doos not collect pollen. It goes in search of pollen especially, and also for nectar. When the pollen of the flower is ripe, and fit for the use of the bee, there is nectar; when there is no nectars there is no pollen fit for use in the flower. It is generally supposed also, that the bee constructs the wax from which it constructs its comb, from such vegetable substances. This is also an error. The wax is a secretion from its body, as the honey is; and it makes its rance in small scales or flakes, under be rings of the belly, and is taken off by other bees, rendered plastic by mixture of the saliva of the been mouth and laid on the walls of the cell with the tongue, very much in the same way a plasterer uses his trowel -Albany
