

Montrose Democrat.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN MONTROSE COUNTY.

E. B. CLASE & ALVIN DAY, Editors.

Montrose, Thursday, July 27, 1854.

In the Menodiv.

By SATYR TAYLOR.

He is in the summer meadows,
In the fields all alone,
With the sun on his head,
And the dew on his mid-day throne.
The smell of the flowering grasses
Is sweeter than any rose,
And a million happy insects
Sing in the warm breeze.
The mother lark that is brooding
Feels the sun on her wings,
And the deeps of the noon day glitter
With a million of fairy things.
From the billow green beneath me
To the fatness of the blue above,
The creatures of God are happy
In the warmth of the summer love.
The infinite bliss of Nature
I feel in every vein;
The light and the life of Summer
Blossom in heart and brain.
But darker than my shadow
By thunder and sun unfurled,
The awful Truth arises,
That death is in the world!
And the eye may be as ever,
And never a cloud be curled,
And the air be living odors,
But death is in the world.
Out of the deeps of sunshine
The invisible host is hurled;
There's life in the summer meadows
But death is in the world!

Fire-Side Reading.

Reverie of the Church Sexton.

"Splendid day! We'll have quite a turn out. There's nothing like sunshine to draw an audience. It's better than all the popular preachers that ever were born—Oh! there's my memorandum book; I'd like to have forgotten it, and if then directions hadn't been made to, most likely I should have lost my place. Let's see. [Takes out a memorandum and reads:]
"By order of Judge R. the woman who squints and eats carmelon seeds is not to be put in the seat in front of him."
"By order of squire B. the young man who ogles his daughter and wears plaid pants is not to be put in the seat on the other side of the church."
"By order of the wealthy Miss Trudence, Prim the young man whose clothes smell of cigars and brandy, shall be set behind her."
"The request of Mr. A. mechanic, that strangers be not shown into his pew—to be attended to if convenient."
"Quite a chapter, anyhow. But people are beginning to streak it. There's too young women, middle-aged, and old. I guess, generally don't come quite so early as this. Have a seat, name—She says with a bow, if you please, sir—No matter, politeness is a cheap article, it don't cost nothing. So here goes the two women into one of the black wall pews. Here's two more birds of the same feather; woolen shawls, straw bonnets and cotton gloves; wall pew, second from the door, good enough in all conscience.
"Ah! there's a bride. Satin velvet, and white kids; fine broadcloth and white veil. Shall I have the pleasure of showing your self and lady some seats? They must have some first rate seats, for they are evidently somebody. What difference there is in folks!
"Now there's a dress-maker and a school-mistress, nobodies. Back seats, good enough. Two young lawyers—somebodies! I must find a seat in the middle aisle. A broken down minister, coat rather seedy, cravat rather coarse—nobody—side aisle.
"Six fashionable boarding-school girls—somebody—middle aisle, if possible. Scowled cheeks, but a splendid silk cloak—somebody—middle aisle. An apprentice boy, decent looking, but a nobody—side aisle.
"Wholl say I ain't a judge of human nature? Don't I know who a mat is the minute I see him?
"Kory there's one of our seely cods, old fellows coming. Don't I set him down as a nobody, and won't he be glad to get any kind of a seat? I'll show folks that I understand my business. Have a seat sir?
"Confound my ill luck! Just as I was putting him into one of the poorest seats in the house, along comes Judge R. who's spitting him out, and says to me, 'Ah! how do you do, Governor? Take a seat with me, my wife will rejoice to meet you. Shaking hands with the seely cod, he looked daggers at me, and I'll pet a furore I've lost my place. Who'd have thought the old fellow was an ex-Governor! But that comes of looking as meek as a schoolmaster, and dressing like a wood-sawyer! Why don't folks, as ought to, hold up their heads and be somebody!"

Getting Along.

There are two ways of getting through the world. Some men have a knack of 'getting along' while others work their way. The man who 'gets along' is always devising some expedient by which to shirk the primal duty—rather blessing—of labor. He starts a 'get along' or exhibits a fat hog to the gazing populace, or he invents a quick machine warranted to 'cure all the ills that flesh is heir to,' and gets a minister to endorse it; he advertises five hundred receipts for making a fortune in less than no time, offering them to the gullible public for the extraordinary price of one dollar, postpaid; or he turns politician, and is rewarded with a considerable extent of his pursuit, now running in one direction, and now another, and thus he calls 'getting along'.

The man who 'works his way' in the world chooses the business of life with careful reference to his talents and capacities, and then steadily sticks to it. He becomes master of one string, and draw from it such melody as soothes him in the darkest hours. If he does not grow rich he becomes respected and honored. His perseverance is counted unto him as a virtue, and men say he is one of the old standards. He sticks to his business, and his business sticks to him. What it brings him he knows how to value and earn, for he has earned it. He has his 'ups and downs,' but they are only the undulations which carry him steadily over the waves of life's ocean. With continued practice comes skill, and that is always in demand. So he 'works his way' upward, and is known as a rising man. But he does not go up like a rocket to come down like its stick. His progress is gradual, but sure, for he 'works his way,' he lays a good foundation for every upward step—develops his powers and is happy in their exercise. He is a truly devoted man, for he 'works his way' and all labor is worship in an inferior degree. He fulfills the object of his being, in accordance with the laws of the Creator, for all things in nature 'work their way.'

The man who 'gets along' may get rich but his life is always a failure—a mere make-shift. His riches may be admired, but he is seldom respected. Most often he does not attain wealth and some times he gets nothing out of it. He is a workaholic, who would not work for himself in a last, obliging to work for others.

There is a knack of 'getting along,' but the true art of life consists in 'working your way.' Young men, concentrate your power. Diffusion is the great evil of life. Become master of your business, and you are master of other men. For he who by application and perseverance acquires facility and aptitude, is always in demand, and is bound to succeed.

Gen. Jackson and Gen. Miller.

The following from the Buffalo Commercial, is so characteristic of Gen. Jackson that we are sure it will be read with interest by every one.
On the accession of Gen. Jackson, the small clique of intrigues who clustered about the Democratic office in that State, pointed the federal offices in that State among themselves. To one of their number was assigned the Collectorship of Salem. The war with Miller was proscribed without hesitation or compunction. The selection made by the Statesman clique was accepted by Old Hickory, with out examination or inquiry, and Gen. Miller's successor was nominated to the Senate. When the nomination came to be acted upon, Col. Benton, impetuous and asked that it might lay over. He was sure that the President would not intentionally remove the incumbent—there must be some mistake about it, and desired time to bring the facts of the case to his consideration. The request was complied with, as a matter of course. Col. Benton immediately visited upon Gen. Jackson, and the interview is said to have been of high interest. A gentleman who was intimate at the White House, used to describe it somewhat in the following style:
"General Jackson, do you know, sir, who is collector at the port of Salem, Massachusetts, sir?"
"I can't think of his name, Colonel, although I've just sent it up to the Senate. But he is a good man, I know, and a good democrat, too, for Green and Henshaw both told me so."
"But sir," rejoined Col. B., "I beg to inquire if whether you know who the present incumbent is, sir—the officer whom you have intended to remove, sir?"
"No—I can't remember his name—but I know he is a—d—d New England Hartford Convention Federalist, for Green and Henshaw both told me so."

"Sir, the present collector of the port of Salem is Gen. Miller, who fought with so much distinction on the northern frontier, in the war with Great Britain, sir."

"Not the brave Colonel Miller, who said 'I'll try' when asked if he could take a—d—d British entrenchment at Bidge-water?"

"Yes, sir," said Col. Benton, "he is the same man, sir."

"The d—d he is. Where's Donelson?"

A sharp pull at the bell was followed by the prompt appearance of a servant.

"Tell Col. Donelson I want to see him—quick!"

Mr. Donelson entered.

"Donelson, I want the name of the fellow nominated for Collector at Salem withdrawn instantly. By the eternal! these politicians are the most remorseless scoundrels alive."

Write a letter to Gen. Miller, and tell him he shall hold the office as long as Andrew Jackson lives. Stay! I'll write myself—the assurance will be more gratifying as coming from a brother soldier."

Gen. Jackson, who was sitting in a chair, rose and said to the servant, "Bring me a glass of water."
