> Life's Poetry. The proudest poetry of youth Is-" Would I were a man?" The golden years that lie between, Youth like a dream would span— 'Tis in its thought, 'tis in its heart-Tis ever on its tongue;

But oh! the peetry of ago.
Is this—" When I was young!" Thus, in the morn of life, our feet Would distant pathways find; The sun still face to face we greet The shadows fall behind! But when the morn of life is o'er. And nature grows less kind, The lengthening shadow creeps before-

The suplight falls behind. With many a murmur slow and sad, The srteam of life flows on; That which we prized not when we had, Is doubly prized when gone! And many a sad and solemn truth Lies written on Life's page, Between the "Poetry of Youth" And "Poetry of Age."

From Europe-Battle of Inkermann.

So simple in its main thread is the story of the battle of Inkermann, that the official depatches and fuller correspondence which reach us this week scarcely modify the tale: but rather, as usual, enabled us to realize the magnitude of the contest, its desperate obthe imminent peril of our (allied) soldiers, and the heroism which enabled them to en-

To augment the weight of the force brought down to crush the besiegers, the now useless army of the Danube had been withdrawn from Moldavia, leaving Bessarabia still defended by its special army, but not it is supposed, entirely exhausting the reinforcements to be brought from the interior.

The effort of Menschikoff to throw his strength into a succession of powerful and, if possible decisive blows, is shown by the advance of Dannenberg's army in the very lightest order, augmenting the numbers about and dollars of the money he would have stop-Sebastopol, without much regard either to ped had he not expected to get the sum their equipment or provision.

a portion of the British and French forces. Thus the allies were to be occupied all around, while the weak, unintrenched, and unfortified point in their position towards the valley of the Inkermann, was to be penetrated by a force of great weight and momention.

It was with the earliest dawn, enveloped in mist and rain, that the allies hearing, without seeing, the movement of the enemy, roused themselves to a comprehension of that which they were to expect. They were attacked in position, by troops converging into a narrow and broken ravine, or meeting of several ravines; and here, notwithstanding ail the so-French commander, the English soldiers were way.
