

The Montrose Democrat.

A WEEKLY JOURNAL—DEVOTED TO POLITICS, NEWS, LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, SCIENCE, AND MORALITY.

Chase & Day, Proprietors.

Montrose, Susquehanna County, Penn'a, Thursday Morning, February 22, 1855.

Volume 12, Number 8.

Select Poetry.

Visions of the Past.

BY R. M. LURE.

Up from the dim old Past are visions stealing, Bright visions, tinged with memory's finest gold;
That wake within the throbbing heart a feeling, Though in years grown old.
Oh silent Past! from out thy dark dominions, What scenes forgotten in the world's great strife, Come sweeping upward on wild fancy's pinions, Once again to life.
Before we fit the friends of early childhood, Each rose-bud cheek just bursting into bloom;
And by-gones come like flowers of the wildwood, Yielding a rich perfume.
Here all my schoolmates, like the pearls of beauty,
Are clustering 'round me as they did of yore;
Soft blue-eyed maidens, with lashes long and luscious, And bright boys a score.
And perch'd upon his quaint old oar, the master, Demurely looks upon those bands of hope That circle round him, and his heart beats faster As they daily ope.
I see the river with its crystal waters Still gliding onward through the field and wood; Embosomed in its heaven's peerless daughters, Starry sisterhood.
Around my chamber, like the mists of even,
Are flitting spirits of the long-gone dead;
Like angel visitants from far off heaven, Sound their airy tread.
I hear their voices in the darkness 'round me,
As winds, deep-laden with the flowers' perfume, Creep thro' the casement—read the spell that bound me—
In through the gloom.
Here dimly seen the form of a lovely maiden, Whose azure eyes are bright on memory's page;
Who, beautiful as was a flower of Aiden, Died in springtime age.
Down in the churchyard where the tall wood darkens
Around with shadows where the daisies are long,
Friends weeping laid her when the yellow Autumn Waived its dying song.
No marble pile is reared above her bosom,
To tell the resting place of one so fair;
But sweet and snowy as the hawthorn's blossom Are the flowers there.
Alas, that beauty in its first warm flush, Should fade and wither as the forest leaf;
That hearts should die in their pure virgin glush—
Ah! and die of grief!
But farewell visions of the dim old ocean,
That nightly reappear to me in sleep;
I turn away from these with sad emotion,
To my heart's own age.
And there in secret do I read true histories Of loves, hopes, dangers in the east and west; Bright treasures, ever to the world great mysteries.
But the heart's pure gold, Butler, Pa. January, 1855.

Miscellaneous.

MORAL CHARACTER AND THE SABBATH DAY.
No young man can hope to rise in society, or act worthily his part in life, without a fair character. The basis of such a character is a virtuous principle, or a deep fixed sense of moral obligation, sustained and integrated by the fear and love of God. The man who possesses such a character can be truly integrity, truth, benevolence, justice, are not words without meaning. He knows and feels their import, and aims in the whole tenor of his life to exemplify the virtues they express. Such a man has decision of character; he knows what is right and is firm in doing it. Such a man has independence of character; he thinks and acts for himself, and is not to be made a tool to serve the purposes of a party. Such a man has consistency of character; he pursues a straight-forward course, and what he is today you are sure of finding him to-morrow.
Such a man has true worth of character, and his life is a blessing to himself, to his family, and to the world. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy: This is the commandment from God; and were I to comprise all my directions to you in one, it should be this.
Nothing furnishes so sure a protection against the allurements of the world; nothing tends so much to invigorate private virtue, and diffuse around a healthy public spirit, as a serious observance of the Lord's day. No young man, who habitually keeps this day, is in danger of having his principles undermined or his morals corrupted. There is something in the very act of ceasing from worldly occupations on this holy day, and repairing with the people of God to worship Him in the sanctuary, which wonderfully tends to strengthen all good habits, and to adorn the character with the charms of a fair and lowly virtue.

Ms. PARTINGTON, reading an account of a railroad accident, was much surprised to learn that the locomotive had been driven off the track by one of the switches. "She shouldn't have thought," she said, "that the great iron engine would mind such a little thing as a switch?" "Yes, but you must remember, mamma," said the boy, "the locomotive has a tender behind it. Oh, that indeed," replied the old lady, "assuming her power, well, you needn't talk about it, my son, go on with your lesson."

A Western Editor complaining that he could not sleep one night, summed up the causes.
A wilding babe overstepped months—dog howling under the window—a cat in the alley—a colored woman at the door—a pig trying to get in at the back door. Poor fellow!

A critic once, with indelible ill-nature, picked out all the faults of a beautiful portrait, presented to Apollo. The god ordered a boson of his best Persianian wheat to be carefully winnowed, and he presented the critic with the chaff.

FOR THE DEMOCRAT.

Messrs. Editors:—When I last wrote you on the subject of Intermitting Springs, I did not intend again to trouble the publishers or the public. But I have wished to correct two or three of the errors which occurred in my last communication, and to add a word or two further of explanation. This I have long deferred, because in a note received from Mr.
Clarke I understood him to express a design to offer something more upon this topic, which I should be glad to hear, as nothing is so pleasing and satisfactory to me as to know the reasons, the "why" and "wherefore," of anything under consideration. Those who receive things on the run, take them for granted without stopping to investigate causes, were doubtless wearied of this long ago, and thought the subject exhausted. Those, also, gifted with ability to perceive original truths at a glance; may have the start of me—may have viewed the whole, and are likewise tried. But I am confident that Dr. Constock's theory elucidating this phenomena, has not been at all generally, nor satisfactorily, nor correctly understood. Even Mr. Clarke's first proposition—in the one in general terms—I conceive was but a reiteration of Dr. C's hypothesis. Mr. Clarke's revised theory is a beautiful one. Its contemplation affords delight. It is one of Nature's beneficent provisions that minute tubes and porous substances have power to transmit and retain fluids without the aid of the earth's attraction and rin in opposition to the force of gravity. It is probably in part (though likely in small part) by help of this capillary attraction that trees and plants draw their sustenance from the ground, and carry their sap through their poes. The primary cause of this capillary action is not, so far as I know, understood any more than is the principle of attraction in general. True, Dr. Constock remarks in relation to it, that "the cause of this seems to be nothing more than the ordinary attraction of the particles of matter for each other.
The sides of a small orifice are near to each other as to attract the particles of the fluid on their opposite sides, and as all attraction is the direction of the greatest quantity of matter, the water is raised upwards, or in the direction of the length of the tube." This appears plausible. But suppose a capillary tube has one half its length plunged beneath the surface of a vessel of liquid; would there not be as much of the matter of the tube below the surface, as above? And would not this matter exert its attraction to draw the water within the tube downward as much as upward? How then does such attraction draw the fluid to rise in the tube?
Some may deem such questions evadatory, or trifling, but Dr. Constock will not. His attainments and research are too substantial, and he too much loves investigation for truth's sake—for science's sake.

But it seems to me that Mr. Clarke's theory, pretty and satisfactory as it is, is not Dr.
Constock's theory, notwithstanding Mr.
Clarke said that it vindicates the latter's theory. I have been asked, you will recollect, "Why reason against an established fact? I am not aware that I have done so." I have reasoned against an evident impossibility, viz: that the force of the siphon above, as is plainly indicated by Dr. Con-stock, could ever fill the siphonic channel so as to set the siphon in operation, unless the rills were at the same time able to keep the siphon acting constantly. Dr. Constock says that the siphon will begin to act as soon as the rills have filled it to its apex. Now I have yet to learn how this can be possible, without the aid of more hococus than ever the ignorant and superstitious would be apt to attribute. Whence comes the necessary preponderance of water? Indeed, the rills could never fill the siphon to its vertex. Capillary attraction or some other cause must co-operate to reach that point even, and when that is gained siphonic action could not begin till the same auxiliary cause should fill the channel to a point just beyond this.

In my last communication to the Democrat the following errors appeared:
"Dr. C. would despise literally all who go in leading-strings." Not "literally," but "literally," a word used without authority to signify "as regards erudition and science."
"The 18th chapter of 1st Corinthians."
"Mechanics (the science) has never" etc.
"Two or three" etc. occurred while the subjects to which they relate was omitted.
The connection was in one place broken by the insertion of what was intended for a marginal note.

Truly,
E. A. WESTON.
Brooklyn, Feb. 1855.

Two printers in the Plymouth Rock office tired of taking impressions on the forms of that paper, tried it on the heads of two ducks. After several settings up they succeeded in getting such fair proof of the matter that the minister of the place was called in and worked off the whole four forms in two full editions, leaving them looked up for life. Now let them "circulate the documents."—American Banner.

"The documents" will be printed and issued in sheets, of course.

"Dean Sir," hisped a great lady, in watered silk, at the World's Fair, "have the goodness to inform me if there are noblemen in the United States."
"Yes, ma'am," answered a full fed Jonathan
"I am one of them."
"William, I fear you are forgetting me," said a bright-eyed girl to her sweet heart the other day.
"Yes, ma'am, I have been for getting you these two years."

Political Articles.

Wilmot on the Tariff Question.

The subjoined extracts from a speech delivered by the Hon. DAVID WILMOT, in Congress, July 1, 1846, we publish for the purpose of giving our readers some idea of the gross and manifest inconsistency between his course then and the sentiments which he has more recently expressed in his letter to Mr.
Laporte, and which we published some two weeks since. We allow to every man, public or private, the right to change his opinions, provided he does so from honest convictions of previous error; but we cannot suppose, in Mr. Wilmot's case, that the free trade of 1846 would be the tariff man of 1855, if a United States Senator were not to be elected by the present Legislature. The change of sentiment in him has actively proceeded from an impure and selfish motive, and we confide in the honesty and intelligence of the Legislature to teach him, what it does not appear to know, that under all circumstances, in politics or trade, honest and manly dealing are the only sure passport to respect and confidence of the people:

"Sir, believing as I do, I cannot give the influence of my voice, however humble it may be, in support of the tariff of 1842. I believe it unjust and oppressive, imposing heavy burdens upon the labor and industry of the country, for the purpose of building up a monopolizing and privileged class. I am opposed in principle to all partial legislation.
I believe it at war with the spirit and genius of our institutions, and dangerous to the equal rights and liberties of the people. This government was established for the equal benefit and protection of its citizens, and is confined within its proper and legitimate limits, and its duties are simple; regulating our intercourse with foreign nations, affording protection to person and property, leaving each to pursue that particular employment or branch of industry which he may deem most profitable, or best adapted to his tastes and habits."

"It is urged by the protectionists, that the imposition of high restrictive and prohibitory duties benefits the whole country, and every branch of domestic industry. This, sir, I deprecate. In my view the falsity of this proposition is as clearly demonstrable as any mathematical problem. If what was taken from one man was returned to him by another, and so on throughout the whole community or State, it would benefit no one, but leave each standing exactly where he was when the process commenced. Again, all wealth is the product of labor. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protective tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increased profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manufacturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits of a particular department of labor beyond what they would
otherwise be, you must of necessity draw
those increased profits from the labor of some
other. If this proposition be correct, the subject would resolve itself into an answer
of the simple question: Do high protec-
tive tariffs increase the profits of the manu-
facturer? If so, it follows that those increas-
ed profits are drawn from some other department of industry. It would really be a protection, you enhance the profits