The knowing Know Nothings then, who care not a fig for slavery or Free Soilism, excent as viewed in the light of a business transaction, must accomplish somerthing, to give the business at the lowest price, that I can do it the South an assurance that they were acting honestly and live. Those having claims, I believe will find it main good faith. The feat performed was the election of Mr. Wilson as United States Senator, and while he openly professed, before fore going elsewhere,

That he, as a faithful disciple of "Sam," is leagued with southern slave holders to give a nationality to the secret order, and in this way obtain the office of the general government, leaving Free-Soilism to take care of itself, is too palpable to admit of a doubt, and this fact alone is well calculated to give to the supposition that Free-Soilers in Massachusetts are governed more by selfish motives than to promote the freedom of the slave.

But of all men in the United States, Free Soilers, honest in their convictions and sipcere in their endeavors, who have joined this order, have the least right to complain. If to give a nationality to the order, the sacrifice of anti-slavery feelings is to be made, what right have Free Soilers to grunble ? They joined the order to crush out Catholicismthey gave it power and strength-they built up a giant and put a club in his hand-and if their own brains are beat out. community has but little sympathy for them. Deception and hypocracy were the only principles which governed the order in all the elections of 1854, and if Mr. Wilson, acting upon the first principles of the organization, has deceived his friends, he only done what the whole their fellow men their intention to vote this or that ticket, as their political affinities happened to be before their connection with the order, and all the time intend to do the very reverse, what right have they to complain when their own leaders practice the same kind of deception towards them? Do men expect they can, by means of such a secret order, deceive the "outsiders," and escape the consequences of deceit themselves ? The man who will not hesitate to violate moral principles in his social or political relations by the practice of deceit, will not hesitate to do the same thing towards those with whom he is in nightly council.
