

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NORTHERN PENNA.

RELECTIONS
Upon receiving a copy of my first Poem published in the Village Newspaper.

Ah! here it is! I'm famous now...
"An author and a poet!"
"It really is in point!"
"How proud I'll be to show it!"
Add gentle Ann! What a thrill!
To read these ardent lines and know
To whom they are addressed.

of a marble spike—watch cases just big enough to hold a three cent piece, pen-wipers that fill the point of a pen full of wool—and divers other non-sensical inconspicuous trifles by specializing females the netting being all very shabby and the stitches very long; (I suppose they think we don't know the difference) to palm off upon victimized gentlemen, and they resigly submit to a price so exorbitant that if a Chatham st. Israelite had the impudence to ask if they'd straightened out his fish-book nose like turnip-pudding. The prettiest looking girls are always placed where the least attractive-looking merchandise is displayed, and they ask the biggest kind of price, trusting to the gallantry of the gentlemen "not to beat them down" flatter themselves, I suppose, that their pretty looks are a "value received" for the exchange. One consequence of this arrangement is, that every buyer spends all the money he has in his purse, taking in exchange thereof a lot of stuff utterly useless, and so ridiculous as to laugh at, he is fain to get rid of the rubbish by giving the whole to his chambermaid. Sometimes your purchases will hold together until you leave the room, and sometimes not; you must show yourself a man and "equal to either fortune."

There was a Post Office—pretty girl called me, had a letter for me—bought it, and told me nothing in it—she said, "You're anxious to have me how much I weighed—paid her the money, and she told me within fifty-one pounds and a half—a young woman wanted me to invest in the 'grab bag'—gave half a dollar and fished 'em out—got in three times trying, a tin whistle, half a stick of candy, and a peanut doped up in tissue-paper. Went on to the auction table, where I saw much competition with a ringlet-boned beauty (who was not there to make Fort-Funk bid against probable purchases) succeeded, in bidding in a China vase, which I soon discovered had a hole in the bottom, and wouldn't hold water any more than it would back pork. If I had thought it any where else, should have bought it I had been swindled, and demanded my money back, but here, I supposed it was an examination of some of the new discovered principles of fair dealing, with which I was not yet acquainted. Was much amused with the way in which they disposed of the unsold goods—certain number of articles (things left at the table tended by the homely girls) and for each article twenty tickets were put into a lot, and those who were to have the prizes—should have thought it was just the same as a lottery, if I had not been acquainted with the ladies and known they wouldn't do anything so naughty. Came to a place where an old lady, with steel spectacles, was cutting up a loaf of cake into many small pieces—asked, "what's that?" she said, "it's a piece of cake, and she proposed to sell it for a quarter of a dollar, and give the ring to the lucky buyer—wondered if it wasn't another lottery on a small scale, but supposed it couldn't be worth the tender room. It is a curious metropolitan fact, that at parties, balls, or wherever a refreshment table is spread, every man seems to regard it his duty to fill himself to the very mouth with all the delicacies of the season, as if he was a gun, and anxious to ascertain its calibre, and find out how quickly he could be loaded in case of necessity. And the ladies are not far behind; this evening, I learned how much a female can eat in a charitable cause—a pale-faced ball-room belle is a modern Sphinx—a gastronomic problem, whose solution will probably never be satisfactorily expounded. Having a previous impression that they wouldn't eat more than I had, money today for I invited a lady to take some refreshments, and I certainly think that, like the countryman, she imagined that she was bound to eat all the bill-of-fare called for. She ate oysters—fried lobsters—boiled turkey with oyster-sauce, celery—oysters on the shell—ice cream, sponge cake, and Charlotte Russe—Roman punch, two water-biscuits, coffee, and cold cucumber, lobster salad, oysters broiled, chocolate again, and six on the shell—orange jelly, grape diet, cake; she then hinted again at oysters, but as the supply had run out, she was obliged to go hungry—paid the bill with a certified check on the Merchant's Bank, which luckily covered the amount, and greatly relieved my mind; for I feared there would be a balance which I would have to give my friend. Being previously acquainted the articles required by my friend, I immediately left my got home, and proceeded to examine my purchases—found that the slippers—having been pasted together without the slightest regard to permanency, had come apart in my pocket my comforter had raveled out, so that I had about six inches comfort, and a wad of yarn big enough to make a horse-blanket—my dressing gown had been made of a moth-eaten remnant, and where there was only sewing every stitch was long as a railroad, but the sleeves laid, I verily believe, bent in with court plaster, and the long seams closed with carpenter's glue.

Made up my mind that the objects of that feminine institution, a Ladies' Fair, are somewhat as follows: Firstly, to give the ladies an opportunity to show their neat clothes and gold studs; secondly, to give the poor a chance to get money, without any preliminary introduction. Secondly, to beg as much money as possible from the gentlemen, for as the ladies are the transparent formality of larcin and sale—which sale includes the lover, who is really the only article fairly "sold" in the whole collection. Thirdly, to give some money to the occasionally poor, if there is any left after paying expenses. In view of the Committee don't seem to be carrying life.

In New York, by a refinement in benevolence, engendered by the hardness of the times, and the necessity of making the money go far as it will, charity money answers a double purpose; procuring pleasure for the rich, and soup for the poor. Thus, if you pay three dollars for a ticket to the Opera or ball, you can enjoy your Art, Scholastic, without a double rebuke, and can eat oysters and Turkey, and gulp down cans and ices, till your stomach "strikes" in the labor of love, with the happy consciousness, that it is all for "sweet charity"—and if the three dollars, before it reach the needy, in whose behalf you gave it, dwindles to three dimes and a sp, you can, knowing you have done your duty, patiently exclaim with the noble Titian, "Thou canst not say I did it!"

Q. K. PHILLIPS DESCRIBES, P. B.
Paddy, did you ever catch a bat? I did that.
At Miss Moloney's ball, Mike Finigan brought the fat of the pig shovel across me.

Can't you give me a clean towel, cap? No, more than fifty passengers have used that same towel, there, and you are the first man that's said a word against it!

I was in a high station in like a man on the top of a monument—seeing a thing appear round to him, and he appears small to everybody.

What I did that.
At Miss Moloney's ball, Mike Finigan brought the fat of the pig shovel across me.
