THE LARGEST CHROULATION IN NORTHERN PENN'A. J. D. McCOLLUM, Epitors A. J. GERRITSON.

Montrose, Thursday Aug. 14 1856. Foreign Policy.

From a numbilet entitled "Words of counsel, to men of business," written by a business man, we make the following extract on the subject of our foreign policy. It is good common sense talk. Read it.

The anxious wish of the American people -let mischievous traducers say what they please—is for honorable peace with all the world, and strict neutrality in the conflits of foreign nations. Never dide the wish more strongly move the people than at this very Cider Mills. Feed Cutters, Corn Shellers, Corn moment. Commerce, and manufactures, and agriculture, and the mechanic arts never more prosperous than now, need and will exact, a peaceful policy from our ruler. The nomination at Cincinnati was hailed by all thoughtful men at liome, and will be so regarded abroad, as the triumph of the best sort of peaceful influence and sentiment-those which are consistent with jealous maintenance of national honor and national interests. Nothing can more tend to maintain peace with foreign nations—and especially that great nation from whom we inherit so many virtues and some peculiarities than such concord and united counsels as the Convention at Cincinnati presented, united on all questions of internal policy, and united in the choice of their candidates. What could more stimulate the aggression of foreign, nations, especially those whose commercial interest it may seem to be to divide us, than the prospect that, for four years to come, there are to be domestic bickerings and discordant counsels-the North arrayed against the South, and the South against the North-an accidental and experienced Executive, in turmoil with Congress, and looked upon as an enemy worse than a foreign foe by a large portion. of the people. The most hostile Englishman or Frenchman that ever railed at our free institutions never breathed harsher or more envenomed words-amounting to moral treason-than were familiarly uttered and vehemently applauded in the assemblage which lately met in Philadelphia. The peace which they must expect from the world is only the peace which pity might vouchsafe to grant not the peace which union and strength de-no word of sectional discord. The spectacle and Tobacco, plug and fine cut, Chewing and there exhibited was the representation of a unifed, high-spirited, and yet peace-loving nation. The only word of dissent that was nation. The only word of dissent that was whispered came from the Sonthern lips, and they were words (and this the calumniators of the South would do well to remember) of wratus, do. and Washing Soda, Cream Tarter, caution and circumspection on the side of and Super Carb Soda Tarturie Acid, Licorico peace. For it is a fact worthy to be meditated on even by fanatics, and certainly by from N. Y., Cassin buds, Canary seed, Nutmegs, Northern man of business that more than ted on even by fanatics, and certainly by Northern men of business, that more than once in the history of our country, have Southern statesmen saved us from the calamities of actual war,or those hardly less annoying inflictions of commercial anxiety whether there will be war or not. The much-reviled South has sometimes saved us from the follies passions of the North. They are our friends and brothers yet.

And most all did the nomination, by cordial unanimity; of James Buchanan says to Garden seeds, slate and lead pencils, Axe handthe world that the United States desires hon-les, Brooms, Tooth Ache Ointment, an almos orable peace. "The nomination of Mr. Buchanan," writes

Fremont's father-in-law, to the citizens of Missouri, "determines my course. I consider him the safest chance for preserving the peace of the country, now generally endangered both at home and abroad; and beieving him to be the best chance for peace, I hold it to be the duty of all to support it."

The American people so regard it. Mr. Buchanan has exactly that experience which fits him for the crisis, whether it be one of peace or war, or the anxious, doubtful, crisis of peace or war, when a rash word or a timid look may precipitate an impending evil. He has been under varied circumstances our representative abroad. First, at the court of that great power of the North of Europe, whence more than once out of the thick darkness of apparent despotism, have issued gleams of friendly feeling to our American interests and our country; then and lately, and during a period of grave responsibility, at the metropolis of Great Britain, the seat of intelligence and high civilization more formidable in the rivalry of friendly nations than ruder elements of power. To meet and appre ciate actual kindness, and set not to be swaved too much by it-to assert rights with firmness-to repulse the first signs of indignity-to-conduct controversary with ability and courtesy-and to make strangers, and especially Englishmen (who, to their credit and not to their sliame be it spoken, are always watching and promoting English inways watching and promoting English in lineaming wood, in log or otherwise, churning; terests all the world over), to-make them un-cutting stalks, straw, and hay &c., and various derstand that American interests are dear other uses too numerous to mention. For sevto American statesmen, and will at all hazeeral reasons I can make it an object for those

Consisting of whether a Republic could wage a war in a distant country. The war was waged and trial victory was won. The great executive trial was withstood. The flag of the Union was carried by our gallant soldiers to the centre of an enemy's country. It was magnanimously withdrawn when the victory was won-and it is part of Mr. Buchsnan's fame, one of the elements of strength he now has at home and abroad, that he was one of that Cabinet which carried the war to its wonder-
