Horrible Cruelty to a Woman— Probable Murder—The Victim Fenatcius of her Bible.

The Madison (Wis.) Journal, of the 1st insta comains an account of a most fieudish piece of cruelty, perpetrated towards a woman in that vicinity, and whose dead and mangled remains, were just discovered on lizing a profit by shipping hides to Liverpool American woman named Mrs. Manley lately a resident of a shanty in that neighborhood. It is supposed that she was murdered by her lu band, who had often attempted it by beat has since fled to parts unknown. A young lad gives the paper above alluded to some particulars of horrible treatment to her as follows: Having heard Manley threaten to what was in store for her. He found her seated on the floor, clothed in rags, and with a face and person that showed evidence of a recent brutality, reading from a small Bible. She received her visitor courteously, "very much as a lady," as he expressed it, and thanked him for his kindness, but told him she was "a miserable, heart-broken wretch, and she hoped to die soon." She said that for two or three years past she had " suffered all that hell could compass, in mind, person, and soul; that she had been forced, time and again, even to doubt if there was a God! but that, so long as she still possessed the Bible she then hel !- the last gift of her dend mother-she could not be entirely lost; but that her hasband had tried often to take it from her, in order to pawn it for rum, but she had managed to hide it from him so far."-While they were talking Manley came in .-In the confusion of his sudden appearance, Mrs. M. had forgotten to secrete the book .-As soon as the ruffi in saw it, he attempted to snatch it from her, exclaiming with an put the book in her bosom, begging him, on her knees, " for the love of heaven, for the sake of her soul, and by the memory, of her own dead mother," to let her retain it. He had taken everything else; he might do as he pleased with her and hers, only let her keep the B.ble. During the extraordinary seene the visitor had been too stupefied with amazement to interfere. Be says, "if an angel had been eaught praying, he couldn't hold a candie to the way that woman pleaded." He now stepped, forward to interfere between the two; when, before he gould make an effort to prevent him, Manley raised his foot, covered with a heavy double-soled cowhide boot, and kicked the poor woman full in the face, as she was on her knees hefore kim. Without even a groan she fell over backwards, and Manley jumped upon her, striking his heels with all his force upon her breast. The lad then caught a stick of wood from the door, and knocked the ruffian ming to consciousness the woman vomited great clots of blood, and " talked queer" before she opened her eyes. Leather. It has now become a fixed fact that henceforth the public must reconcile themselves to pay a greatly enhanced price for foot gear, or else relapse into the good old fashion of Romulus and the Sabines, and walk about in all the simplicity of bickory san lals and thongs of hide. In Londan not long since, the Shoemakers' Union, held a public meeting to take measures for the regulation of afuture prices, and to lay explicitly before the public the reasons why an advance was imperative. These were not only numerous but plausible. First was the fact that the cattle formerly running wild over the vast pampas of South America have been nearly exterminaled by disease and by indiscriminate slaughter. Second, that the market had in a great measure been drained by the immense quantities of manufactured leather which had been sent to supply the allied forces in the Crimea. Third, that the peasantry of France

We have above referred to the his home, in order to warn the woman of increasing scarcity of this indispensable article. It will be but a few years before almost every section will be stripped of its forests, and here among the hemlock and oak, the former of which is apparently inexhaustible, must the bulk of the tanning business be located. We believe the largest and most profitable tannery in the State, if not in the country, is at Jersey shore. Contiguous to it is a vast magazine of bark. In fact, the location is just upon the borders of the lumber district. The machinery is propelled by water power. The indes are taken direct to the tannery, and the leather thence to the city by canal; while the bark is purchased from rustics, who peel it "upon shares" for the owner of the timber. Tanneris in this section-and there are many of them-conduct their business with great economy, and have a manifest advantage over others, who are compelled to pay extravagant prices for the necessary astringent, besides having to transport it long distances to the place of its

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced singer of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout enery town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the landiles in any dvillized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest renedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the Carray Parronat saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and care your colds while they are curside, nor neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them it is still made the lest it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afterd those who rely on it the bost agent which our skill can furnish for their cure. and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced singes of the disease.
