"The accident having been variously and incorrectly reported, we have taken pains to ascertain the particulars, which are as follows: On Friday evening, as Mr. Dickinson was riding home from his office, himself, the driver and another person in the wagon; the driver and another person in the wagon, the three sitting on the same seat, the horse took fright as they passed under the Railroad bridge from some persons racing horses on bridge, from some persons racing horses on the road, and ran violently about ten rods, weeks after the term commences, in consequence (one win in the meantime breaking so that the driver had no control of the animal,) when it turned in at the gateway, leading to the house, without any abatement of speed. Mr. Dickinson, seeing that the wagon would come in contact with the left side of, the gate-
