ARIZONA, -The "National Intelligencer," in speaking of a letter from the Hon. Jso. R. BARTLETT, late United States Boundary Commissioner, addressed to Lieut. Moway, Delethe resources of the almost unknown region,

"Contrary to the preconceived opinions of tural as well as mineral resources, and that representative.—Richmond Despatch representative.—Richmond Despatch Siste. The peculiar position of Arizona, with populated by a mixed Spanish and Mexican race, its isolation, and its wonderful resources, all make it a subject of interest, especially to that class of our population who, with restless activity, are constantly desiring new homes, and who yearly move westward in search of them.

During the last session of Congress the subject of the organization of Arizona was agisenate creating a judicial district and land offices. This bill, which failed in the House for want of time, would not, it appears from satisfied their real interest.
