A THERELIES STORY. THE BRIDAL EVE.

One summer night, the blaze of many lights atreaming from the windows of an old lence that reigned through that room, as the manion, perched yonder among the rocks, solitary ludian stood there at the head of the and woods, flashed far over the dark waters of Lake Chamulain.

sin a quiet and comfortable chamber of that fuger. "She has not refused to come? Tell mansion, a party of British officers, sitting around a table spread with wines and y ands, way! I know the forest is dark, and the path discussed a topic of some interest, if it was not the most important in the world, while the trend of the dancers shook the floor of the adjoining room.

Yes, while all was gaiety and dance and was silent. Then, as his answer seemed tremmusic in the largest hall of the old mansion, bling on his lips, the ladies in youder door whose hundred lights glanced for over the waters of Champlain-here, in the quiet room, with the cool evening breeze blowing the two central figures—the Indian, standing in their faces through the open windows, here at the head of the table, his arms folded in the party of British officers had assembled to his war-blanket-that young officer half discuss their wines and their favorite topic. That topic was -the comparative beauty of the women of the world,

"As for me," said a handsome young Eusign, "I'll match the voluptuous forms and then by a word. dark eyes of Italy, against the beauties of all had risen to the Coloneley by his long ser-stained fingers, a bleeding scalp, and long vice and hard fighting, "I have a pretty lass glossy locks of beautiful dark hair ! of a daughter there in England, whose blue eyes and flaxen hair would shame your tragic beauties of Italy into very ugliness."

"I have served in India, as you all must know," answered the one who sat next to the vetran, "and I never saw painting or statute, much less living women half so levely as some of these Hindoo maidens, bending down by the light of torches, over the dark waters of the Ganges:

And thus, one after another, Ensign, Colonel and Major, had given their opinions, untill the young American Refugee, vonder at the foot of the table, is left to decide the argument. That American-for I blush to say it—handsome young fellow as he is, with a face full of massiv beauty, blue deep eyes, ruddy cheeks and glossy brown hair, that American is a Refugee, and a Captain in the British army. He wore the handsome scarlet coat, the glittering epaplette, lace ruffles on his bosom and around his wrists.

"Come. Captain, pass the wine this way!" the dark eyes of Italy, or the graceful forms of Hindoostan ?"

The Captain besitated for a moment, and then tossing off a bumper of old Maderia, · Mould your three models of beauty, your Italian queen, your Hindoo nymph, into one, and add to their charms a thousand graces of color and form and feature, and I would not compare this perfection of loveliness for a single moment, with the wild artless beauty of-an American beauty !"

The laugh of the three officers, for a moment drowned the echo of the dance in the next room.

the women of Italy!" "Or the lass of England!" "Or the graceful Hindoo girl!"

The laughing scorn of the British officers stung the handsome Refugee to the quick. "Hark ve!" he cried, half rising from his seat, with a flushed brow, but a deep and deliberate voice; "To morrow, I marry a wife, an American girl! To-night, at mid-night, too, that American girl will join the dance in the next room. You shall see her- you shall riage, Captain," said the gay Ensign, "but we did not think that it would occur so sudden iv? Only think of it!-to morrow you will be gone-settled-verdict brought in-santence passed-a married man! But tell me! How will your lady love be brought to this house? I thought the resided within the rebel to which the race of making subject, as careful love by the resided within the rebel to which the race of making subject, as careful loves Beach pt

"She does reside there! But I have sent a friendly Indian chief, on whom I can place the utmost dependence, to bring her from her present home, at dead of night, through the forest, to this mansion. He is to return by twelve; it is now half past eleven."
"Friendly Indian! echoed the vetran Colonel; rather an old guardian for a pretty woman!-quite an original idea of a Duenna, the world for beauty ?" "Yes, if you do not agree with me, this hundred guineas which I lay upon the table, shall serve our mess, for wine, for a mouth to come! But if you do agree with me-las-without doubt you will—then you are to replace this gold with a hundred guiness of tour own "Agreed,! It is a wager!" chorussed the Colonel and the other two officers.

And in that moment—while the dcorway was thronged by fair ladies and gay officers, attracted from the next room by the debate -as the Refugee stood, with one hand es ing upon the little pite of gold, his ruddy face grew suddenly pale as a shroud, his blue eyes dilated futril they were encircled by a line of all orders should be addressed.

JAS. E BOWERS, Druggist, white en and, he remained there as if frozen to stone.

"Why, Captain, what is the matter?" cri ed the Colonel, starting up in alarm; "do you see a ghost, that you stand gazing there ut the blank wall?

The other officers also starting up in alarm, also asked the cause of this singular demeanor, but still, for the space of a minu'e or more, the Refugée Captain stood there, more like a dead man suddenly recalled to life, than a living being.

That moment pa-sed, he sat down with a sold shiver; made a strong effort as if to command his reason; then gave utterance to n forced laugh. "Ha! ha! See how I have frig bened you!" he said-and then laughed that cold, unnatural hollow laugh again. And yet, half an hour from that time, he freely confessed the nature of the horrid picture which he had seen drawn upon that blank, wainscotted wall, as if by some supernatural hand. But now, with the wine cup in his kand, he turned from one comrade to another, uttering some forced jest, or looking toward. the doorway crowded with officers and ladies, he gaily invited them to share in his remarkalde argument; Which are the most beautiful women in the world? As he spoke the hour struck. Twelve o'clock was there, and with it a footstep, and then a bold Indian form came uiging through the crowd of ladies, thronging yonder doorway.

Silently, his arms folded on his war blanket, a look of calm stoicism on his dusky brown face, the Indian advanced along the room, and stood at the head of the table.-There was no lady with him!

Where is the fair oirl? She who is to be the bride to morrow? Perhaps the Indian has left her in the next room, or in one of the DROFESSOR WOOD'S Hair Rectorati e at other halls of the old mansion, or perhaps—but the thought is a foolish one-she has refused to obey her lover's request-refused to ome to him There was something awful in the deep si table, gazing silently in the lover's face. "Where is she!" at last graped the Reme-has any accident befalen her on the most d'fficult-tell me. Where is the lady for whom I sent you into the Rebel lines ?" For a moment, as, the strange horror of that lover's face was before him, the Indian way the officers from the ball-room, and the party round the table formed a group around rising from his seat, his lips parted, his face ashy, his clenched hand resting on the dark mahogany of the table.

The Indian answered first by an action, Fret action: Slowly drawing his right hand from his war blanket, he belo it in the "And J," said a bronzed old vetran, who light. The right hand clutched with blood-

Then the word: "Young warrior sent the red man for the scalp of the pale faced squaw Here it is !" Yes-the rude savage had mi-taken his nessage! Instead of bringing the bride to her lover's arms, he had gone on his way determined to bring the scalp of the victim to the grasp of her pale faced enemy. Not even a groun disturbs the silence of that dreadful moment. Look there! The lover rises, presses that long hair-to black, so glossy, so heautiful-to his heart, and then-as though a huge weight, falling on his brain, had crushed him, fell with one dead sound on the hard floor.

He lay there-stiff, and pale, and coldhis elenched right hand still clutching the bloody scalp, and the long dark hair fabing in glossy tresses over the floor! This was his bridal evel .

Now, tell me, my friends, you who have heard some silly and ignorant pretender, puifully complain of the destitution of Legend, shouted the Easign; "pass the wine and decide the great question! Which are the most beautiful; the red cheeks of merry England, a tradition of England, or France, or Italy, or Spain, or any land under the heavens, that might in point of awful tragedy, compare with the simple history of David Jones and Jane M'Crea? For it is but a scene from this somewhat flushed as he was with the wine, parrative, with which you have all been familiar from childhold, that I have given you. When the bridegoom, hung there on the floor, with the bloody scalp and long dark tresses in his hands, arose again to the terrible consciousness of life-those words trembled from his lips in a faint and husky whis-

"Do you remember how, half an hour ago -I stood there-by the table-silent and pale, and horror stricken-while you all started up aroufid me, asking me what horrid sight "Compare his American milk maid with I saw? Then, oh then, I beheld a hornd scene-that home, yonder by the Hudson river, mounting to heaven in the smoke and flames! The red forms of Indians going to and fro, amid flame and smoke-tomahawk and torch in hand! There amid the dead Of Unseated Lands in Susq'a Co. bodies and smoking embers, I beheld her form -my bride - for whom I had sent the mesenger-kneeling, pleading for mercy, even as the tomakhawk crashed into her brain." As the horrid picture again came over his following tracts and parts of tracts of unseated Siides, &c., &c. mind he sank senseless again, still clutching lands will be sold at public vendue on the second

I diseases, and the deceptions practised upon their name, to open a Dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give Medical Advice gratis, to all who apply by letter, with a description of their conlition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c...) and in cases of extreme poverty, to furnish medicines free of charge. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most improved modern treatment. The Directors on a review of the past, feel issured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort, have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important but much despised
