The Perils of the Border. While reading recently an account of the frightful massacre of several white families by the Black-foot Indians, we were reminded young lady, the daughter of a distinguished officer of the American Army, played an important part. The story being of a most thrilling nature, and exhibiting in a striking manner the "Perils of the Border," we have insily published, as follows: The angle on the right bank of the Great Kenawha, formed by its junction with the Onto, is called Point Pleasant, and is a place of historical note. Here, on the 10th of Oc ober, 1774, during what is known as Lord Dunmore's War, was fought one of the fiercest and most despeiate battles that ever took place between the Virginians and their forest

After the battle in question, in which the Indians were defeated with great loss, a fort was here erected by the victors, which became a post of great importance throughout the sanguluary scenes of strife which almost immediately followed, and which in this section of the country were continued for many years after that establishment of peace which acknowledged the United Colonies of America a free and independent nation.

At the landing of the fort, on the day our story opens, was fastened a flat-boat of the kind used by the early navigators of the Western rivers.

Upon the deck of this boat, at the moment we present the scene to the reader, stood five individuals, alike engaged in watching a group of persons, mostly females, who were slowly approaching the landing. Of these five, one was a stout, sleek negro, in partial livery, and evidently a house or a body servant; three were boatmen and borderers, as indicated by their rough, bronzed visages and coarse attire; but the fifth was a young man, some two and-twenty years of age, of a fine, commanding person, and a clear, open. intelligent countenance; and in the lofty carriage of his head-in the gleam of his large, which denoted one of superior mind; but as we shall have occasion in the course of cotemporaries. our narrative to fully set forth who and what Engene Furfax was, we will leave him for the present, and turn to the approaching group, whom he seemed to be regarding with lively

The lady in question, was apparently about twenty years of age, and dender and graceful figure, and of that pecul iar east of feature, which, best fes being beantiful in every lineament, rarely fails to affect the beholder with something like a charm. Her traveling costume - a fine brown habit. high in the neck, buttoned closely over her bosom and coming down to her small pretty feet, without trailing on the ground-waboth next and becoming; and with her riding cap and its waving ostrich plume, set guly above her flowing curls, her appearance contrasted forcibly with the rough, unpolished looks of those of her sex beside her, with their lin-ey bed-gowns, scarlet flannel petticoass, and blenched linen caps.

"Oh, Blanche," said one of the more venerconversation which had been maintained since quiting the open fort behind them, "! cannot bear to let you go; for it just seems to me as if something were going to happen to you, and when I feel that way, something generally does happen."
"Well, aunt,"returned Blanche, with a light

Scarcely a hoat de cends the Ohio, that does not encounter more or less peril from the savages that provibalong either shore; and some of them that go down freighted with human life are heard of no more, and none ever returned to tell the tale.' "But why repeat this to me, dear aunt," returned Blanche, with a more serious air. "when you know it is my destiny either good or lad; to attempt the votage! My parents have sent for me to join them in their new home, and it is my duty to go to them, be the peril what it may."

"You never did know what it was to fear!"

pursued the good woman, rather proudly. "No," she repeated, turning to the others. Blanche Bertrand never did know what it was to fear. I believe!"

"Just like her father !" joined the husband of the matron, the brother of Blanche's mo ther, the commander of the station, and the middle aged gentleman mentioned as one of the party, "a true daughter of a true soldier. Her futher, Colonel Philip Bertrand, God bless him for a true heart! never did seem to know what it was to fear-and Blanche is just like him."

By this time the parties had reached the boat ; and the voing man already de-cribed-Eugene Pairfax, the secretary of Blanche's faither-at once stepped forward, and, in a polite and deferential manner offered his hand to:the different females, to assist them on board. The hand of Blanche was the last to touch life and then but slightly, as she sprung quickly and lightly to the deck-but a close observer might have detected the slight fiash which mantled his noble, expressive features as his eve for a single instant met Leis. As he finished speaking. Blanche proceeded to take an affectionate leave of all, receiving many a tender message for her parents from those who held them in love and veneration; and the boat swung out, and began to float down with the current, now fair ly entered upon the most dangerous portion

Reneralent Institution, established by special endocment for the relief of the sick and dis-tressed, afflicted oith Virulent Epidemic diseases. 1 O ALC PERSONS afflicted with Sexual Diseases, such as Spermatorrhoa, Seminal Weakness, Impotence, Gonorthes, Gleet, Syphilis, the Vice of Onanism, or self abuse, &c., &c. The Howard Association, in view of the wful destruction of human life, caused by Sexu-I diseases, and the deceptions practised upon toe unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consuiting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT Worthy o their name, to open a Dispensary for the treat nent of this class of diseases, in all their forms and to give Medical Advice Gratis, to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c...) and in cases of extreme poverty, to furnish medicines free of charge. It is needless to aid that the Association commands the highest medical skill of the age and will furnish the most improved modern treatment.

The Directors on a review of the past, fee assured that their labors in this sphere of benevo-tent effort, have been of great benefit to the flicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important but much despised
