Objections to the Kansas Bill. The three leading objections urged by the opponents of the administration to the Kansas bill, which has recently become a law, are, that the preamble recognizes the legality of the Lecompton Constitution—that it does not secure to the people the right to accept or reject the constitution by their votes; and crew. that it contains the offer of a bribe in the hape of an immense grant of government lands for educational, benevolent and other purposes, as a condition of their acceptance of the proposition submitted to them.

Crittenden Amendment, which received the support of the entire Republican party, contained the same recognition of the Lecompton Constitution, and in precisely the same words, as the conference bill, as follows to wit :-

Kansas did, by a convention of delegates assembled at Lecompton, on the 7th day of November, 1857, for that purpose, form for themselves a constitution and State government." by the Conference Committee, from the bill exercise their judgment and do as they think propreviously voted for by the Republicans, we anomit that they are forever estopped from May 14, 1858.]

Recrise their judgment and do as they think properly in this respect. By order of the Board:

And we may state the additional fact, that no greater amount of lands is donated to Kausas by this bill than was donated to Minnesota by the Act of the last Congress authorizing that Territory to form a Constitution and State Government; and no greater than has been donated to most of the new States of the West; whilst there is no reason to suppose that the amount of lands they may receive can be in any manner affected by the decision of the question whether they will come into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution, or under an entirely different one hereafter to be framed and
