"The Salt, if you Please!" Everybody has a partiality for a dinner, and one of the most frequent expressions at a dinner table is the one which forms our caption, and in order that our readers may knew something of the substance they are using, we will rell them a few facts about salt. Salt is a chemical compound of twenty-three parts by weight of a beautifully silver white but soft metal called sodium, discovered by Sir H. Davy in 1807, and thirty five parts of a pungent, yellowish green gas, called chlorine, discovered by Scheele in 1774-these two combined form this, the most widely diffused and useful of any one compound in the world. It is found in the sea, and in the rocks, from which our principal supply comes. The most wonderful deposits are in Poland and Hunga. where it is quarried like a rock, one of the Polish mines having been worked since 1251. These polish salt mines have heard the groan of many a poor captive, and have seen the last agonies of many a brave man, for until lately, they were worked entirely by the state prisoners of Austria, Russia or Poland, which-ever happened to be in power at the time; and once the offender, or fancied hindrance to some other person's advancement, was let down into this substerranean prison, he never saw the light of day again. So sait has its history as well as science. Other large deposits are found in Cheshire,

where water is forced down by pipes into the salt, and is again pumped up as brine, which is evaporated and the salt obtained. To such an extent has this been carried that one town in the "salt country," as it is called, has scarcely an upright house in it, all the foundstions having sunk with the ground, to fill up the cavity left by the extracted salt. In Virginia there are beds of salt, and the Salmon Mountains, in Oregon, are capable of affording large quantities of the same material. The brine springs of Salina and Syracuse are well known and from about forty gallons of their brine, one bushel of salt is obin Ohio. The brine is pumped up from wells made in the rock, and into which it flows and rons into boilers. The boilers are large iron kettles set in brickwork, and when fires are lighted under them, the brine is quickly evaporated. The moment the brine begins to boil it becomes turbid from the compounds of lime that it contains, and which are soluble in cold, but not in hot water; these first ediments are taken out with ladles called "bittern ladles," and the salt being next deposited from the brine is carried away to drain and dry. The remaining liquid con tains a great quantity of magnesia in various forms, and gives it the name of "bittern" from the taste peculiar to magnesia in every

But how did this salt come into the rock?' is the natural query, and the wonder seems greater when we recollect that salt-beds are found in nearly every one of the strata composing the earth's crust. This fact proves another, that as the majority of these salt beds have come from lakes left in the hollows of the rocks by the recedence of the sea, the sea has through all the geologic ages been as sait as it is to-day. Let us take the Great Salt Lake as an illustration, it being the largest salt lake in the world, but by no means cors is the greatest in extent, it will form the best example. It is situated at an elevation of 4,200 feet above the sea, on the Rocky Mountain, and has an area of 2,000 square miles; yet, high as it is, "once upon a time." as the story-books of our jouvenality used to gav, it was a part of the sea, which refired, by mined to sell them at such prices as will continue the apheaval of the rocks, and that great he to give us the reputation we have borne for sin took its sait water up with it. Should years, that is to sell a good arrive in a very this in time evaporate, and its salt become covered with mud and sand, and the land again be depressed; then, at some distant future age, the people would be wondering how the salt got there, little Minking that the Mormons have ever built a city on its shores when it was a great salt lake. There place in regular geologic series with other rocks, interpresed between red sandstone, magnesian and carboniferous strata; these we can only account for, as we do for other stratified rocks, viz.: that they-were deposited from their solution in water, or carried mechanically to the spot where now found by that ever mobile liquid. We fear we should be accused of an attempt to put our reade s in pickle, so we will stay our pen, hoping they will remember these bits of information when next they say, "The salt, if you please !"-Scientific American.

Diseases, Female Complaints, and all Diseases of the Scaual Organs, arising from excesses and imprudences in life, and emoving all improper discharges from the bladder, kidneys, or sexual organs; whether existing in MALE OR FEMALE, from whatever cause they may have originated, and no matter of how long standing, giving health and vigor to the frame, and bloom to the pallid check.

JOY TO THE AFFLICTED!!! removes all the symptoms, among which will be found indisposition to exertion, less of power, less of memory, difficulty of breathing, general weakness, horror of disease, acak nerves, trembling, draadful horror of death, night sweats, cold feet, wakefulness, dimness of vision, languor, universal assitude of the muscular system, often enormous appetite, with dyspeptic symptoms, hot hands, flushing of the body, dryness of the skin, pallid countenance and eruptions on the face, pain in the back, heaviness of the eyelids, frequently black spots flying before the eyes, with a temporary suffusion and loss of sight, want of attention, great sufusion and loss of sight want of attention, great mobility, reatleasness, with horror of society.

Nothing is more desirable to such patients than solitude, and nothing they more dread for fear of themselves; no repose of manner, no earnestness, no speculation, but a hurried transition from one question to another.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on—which this rediction is a superiably removes—soon follows.

These symptoms, it showed to go on which this medicine invariably removes—soon follows loss of power, fatuity and epileptic fits—in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that these excesses are not frequently followed by those direful diseases—insanity and consumption? The records of the insane asylums, and the melancholy deaths by consumption bear am-ple witness to the truth of these assertions. In lunatic asylums the most melancholy exhibition appears. The countenance is actually sodden & quite destitute—neither mirth or grief ever vis-its it. Should a sound of the voice occur, it is rarely articulate. "With woeful measures wan despair, Low sullen sounds his grief beguiled."

Debility is the most terrible! and has brought thousands to un!imely graves, thus blasting the ambition of many noble youths. It can be cared by the use of this.
