They Are Disunionists. Republicans sometimes complain because they are spoken of as disloyal to the Constitution, and are charged as having contributed, by one copy seventeen weeks for $1. their doctrines and teachings, to such outrages as John Brown's invasion of Virginia. We have no, desire to treat them otherwise than justly, or attempt to fix upon them responsibilities which do not fairly attach to trating the backgrounds of civilization. them. Mere policy, if we were governed by no higher considerations, would prevent us from preferring charges which we could not maintain.

We believe the charge of disloyalty to the Constitution, and of treason at heart to its provisions justly lies at the door of the Republican party. The members of that party -as an organization (there being of course, many honorable individual exceptions)-are not willing to discharge in good faith all the duties imposed by all the articles of that instrument. If they are in favor of the Union, | and General Cameron, the Convention finally is is without the Constitution upon which it declaring for Gen Cameron by a vote of 89 is-founded, or at least without a faithful fulfillment of all its obligations. Wherever this Republican party has the power, it interposes Republican party has the power, it interposes of delegates to Chicago. openly incurring the penalties of the criminal law, the plain commands of the compact which is the basis of the Union. This is treason in fact, although it may escape indictment and conviction as such.

To establish the truth of our remarks and the justice of the charge against the Republican party of disloyalty to the Constitution, we shall only refer in this article to the action
