The pines were dark on Hamoth hill, Their sbng was soft and low; The blossoms in the sweet May winds Were falling like the snow. The blossoms drifted at our feet, The orthard birds song clear; The sweetest and the saddest day It seemed of all the year.

For more to me than birds or flowers, My playmate left her home. And took with her the laughing Spring, The music and the bloom.

She kissed the lips of kith and kin, She Laid her hands in mine: What more could sak the bashful boy Who fed her father's kine?

She left has in the bloom of May;

Of uneventful years; Still o'er and o'er I sow the spring, And resp the autumn cars. She lives where all the golden year Her summer roses blow; The dasky children of the sun Before her come and go.

There haply with her reweled fands She smoothes hersilken gown— No more the home-pun lap wherein I shook the walnuts down.

The wild grapes wait us by the brook,
The brown nuts on the hill,
And still the May-day flowers make sweet
The woods of Follymill.

The lillics blossom in the pond,
The bird builds in the tree,
The dark pines sing on Ramoth hill
The slow song of the sea.

I wonder if she thinks of them, And how the old time seems— If ever the pines of Ramoth wood Are sounding in her dreams, I see her face-I hear her voice;

Does she remember mine? And what to her is now the boy That fed her father's kine?

What cares she that the orioles build For other eyes than ours— That other hands with nuts are filled, And other laps with flowers!

O, playmate in the golden time! Our mossy seat is green; Its fringing violet; blossom yet, The old trees o'er it lean. The winds, so sweet with birch and fern, A sweeter memory blow; And there in spring the robins sing The song of long ago.

And still the pines of Ramoth wood Arc moaning like the sea— The moaning of the sea of change Between myself and thee! SCIENTIFIC ITEMS.

Mr. Connor, the pupil of Mr. Wise the eronaut, was advertised to make an ascension trom Palace Garden at 4 o'clock vesterday afternoon, and at the appointed hour the fences, house-tops and trees in the vicinity were filled with a curious crowd, anxious to see all they could without paying the admittance fee.

The inflation of the baloon—the Venus progressed successfully until one of the strips of oiled muslin, of which it was made, gave way. Mr. Conner sewed it up as best he could, remarking, in reply to interrogatories, that the rent might give way, but that he would not give up the ascension for any such trifle as that. As the balloon filled, the wind, which was blowing in violent gusts, swayed it from side to side with such force that it was all four or five men could do to keep it in its place. Several attempted to dissuade Mr. Conner from the ascension, but he persisted in undertaking it, and when everything was in readiness stepped into the wicker basket, and shaking hands with his wife, gave the word to "let go." The spirit of a dying day Stirs with soft wave the gleamy grass: Eich-flied rot hairs tha sprit pass,

And what its whispers say! Tuke, darling, take my farewell kiss; Another happy day will shine, . With morning sun le as bright as mine-

With evening hushed as this. But will it make you fade more fast, Or pale your bloom, ordin your glow, To feel that one who loved you so

Is buried in the past ! The sun sirks down beneath the hill, From peak to peak, from hole to hole, Dies out the golden aureofe, And night comes grey and chill-

Beckoning the gentle spirit on, The plaintive spirit, doomed to die; Heedless the drowsy flow rets lie, Of the sweet presence gone.

O, fond heatrs, lost with passing pain!. O slighted smiles that once were ours ! O, loved, that in our happiest hours May never share again!
