CONFEDERATE STATES.

Wendell Phillips, one of the Abolition orators, at the close of a long speech, the other day, said :

"Driven to despair the Southern States may be poor and bankrupt; but the poor-est man can be a pirate, and as long as New England's tonnage is a third of that of the civilized world, the South can punish her. We provoked a strife in which we are defenseless. If, on the contrary, we hold ourselves to the strife of ideas, if we manifest that strength which despises insult and bids its hour, we are sure to

" I distrust those guns at Fort Sumter. I do believe Abrahan Lincoln means war. do not believe in the madness of the Cabinet. Nothing but madness can provoke war with the Gulf States. My suspición is this, that the Administration dares not compromise. It trembles be-fore the five hundred thousand readers of the New York Tribune.

But there is a safe way to compromise. It is this : seem to provoke war, connonade the forts. What will be the first result? New York commerce is pale with bankruptcy. The affrighted seaboard sees grass growing in its streets. It will start up every man whose livelihood hang upon a compromise. Those guns fired at Fort Sumter are only to frighten the North into a compromise. " If the Administration provokes bloodshed; it is a trick nothing else. It is the masterly cunning of the devil of compromise, the secretary of state. He is not mad enough to let these states rush into battle. He knows that the age of bullets is over. If a gun is fired in southern wa is over. It a gun is need in southern wa-ters, it is fired at: the wharvess of New York, at the noney of the North. It is means to alarm. It is policy, not sincerity: It means concession. And in twelve months you will see the Union reconstructed with the constitution like that of Montgomery, "New England may indeed never be coerced into a slave confederacy. But when the battles of Abraham Lincoln are ended, and compromises worke than Critenden's are adopted, New England may claim the right to secede. And as sure as gun is fired to-night at Fort Sumter. within three years from to day you will see these thirty states gathered under a Constitution twice as damnable as that of 1787....The only hope of liberty is in fidelity to the slave. Out of that God gives us nothing but hope and brightness. In blood there is sure to be ruin.
