BAD READING. Next to 'mental 'arithmetic,' reading is one of the most greatly abused of the com-

errors, as noticed in the school room. 1. The first error is that of mincing, or half pronouncing words. This is extensively practiced, notwithstanding the caution of authors, and the abundance of pro-nouncing dictionaries. The latter, tho' in every bookstore, are lamentably missing in the school room. Teachers ought to examine critically almost every word that is doubtful orthoepy. Every element in every word should have its proper sound, according to the most approved from constitutional principles, and the de-standards.
