Settle down under the charge thus publicly made, by a man in the position of Mr. eannot believe that any friend of mine would do it himself or ask it of me. Mr. Grow has either perpetrated a great wrong on me, or I have told and am now telling a gross falsehood. If the former, I ought not to be silent, unless he correct the wrong, and this is the matter to be judged of between us. If I have any friends, (and I hope I have some,) to them I would ask this one simple question. Do you believe I ever wrote uch a letter as charged upon me? If you do, you must believe that I am not only mean, but that I am the utterer of repeated falsehoods, and am entitled to no respect at your hands. It you believe I did not, then I claim that you should stand by me, and discountenance and repel, not only the charge itself, which I could readily have forgiven had there been any disposition shown to make it right, but also the pertinacious refusul to correct the wrong, after my absolute denial. What a man would do for himself, ought he not under like circumstances to do for a friend if indeed he be a friend. But it may be said that when important interests are a. I ought to yield my own private feelings. that when important interests are at stake loyal man-the only one with whom the government and all the dearest interests of our country would be safe-the only the present administration in every measure to the bitter end of the rebellion, and erushing it out in the most direct and effeetual manner, so that its haggard head should never again be seen, I might panse and try to forget everything else and do my utmost to elect him. But I believe no such thing. I'do believe that there are many others who have as deep and heartfelt devotion to the country as Mr. Grow has or ever had, and with whom her interests would be equally safe. He may be elected again, and so continue to be for forty years to come, if about once in twelve years the Congressional District can be changed. Fourteen years will do pretty well for one county in a district, ir succession, but fifty would probably suit better. But to all this I have nothing to say. If the people are satisfied, I am. Whether he shall be elected or defeated-whether at the end of every two years he shall see some "great crisis" just ahead, that renders it absolutely necessary that he should be elected just once more. In either event I think the sun will continue to shine, and all creation will not be unhinged. Our government will be sustained-rebellion put down, and we yet be a great and prosperous nation, and the principles of the Republican party still be maintained. If the existence of the Republican party depends alone on electing Mr. Grow to Congress for forty years, or as long as he lives, then it has a poor foundation, and its days I fear are numbered. If it require that any one of its members must submit to any insult or wrong that the spleen of Mr. Grow may choose to heap upon him; and that it, will not answer to say any. thing in self-defence without endangering the party, then is the party weaker than I supposed. A beautiful image of our Saviour had appeared to a monk, and in silent bliss he was gazing upon it. The hour arrived in which it was his duty to feed the poor of the convent. He lingered not in his cell to enjoy the vision, but left to perform his duty. When he returned he found the vision waiting for him, and uttering these words:-"IIadst thou staid, I must have fled."
