FOR THE DEMOCRAT. Friend Gerritson :- The Oration which." thanks, but upon the Oration being read to night. to the Society, it was passed to the hands committee. - This committee being notoriously anti-Democratic-and pressed by outside influences, rejected and returned the Oration, accompanied by no expla-nation but that "it was uncalled for," I wish the public to read the Oration with a knowledge of these circumstances, and then judge if such bigotry as that exhibited by the committee, is the spirit they wish to uphold in our country. E. H. MERRIMAN. Upsonville, Nov. 1862.

Mission of Democracy.

Around the name, Democracy, cluster associations of the loftiest, and most sacred patriotism. It was the influence e voked by such association, that induced the great actors in theidrams of our colonial existence to press forward in the course of instice and right. It was the renius of Democracy that secured the liberties and blessings we now enjoy. When European despotism had extended its baneful paralysis over the prosperous advancement of our manufacturing and agricultural interests, when the plow was arrested, in its furrow, and the mechanics implements were ordered to remain inoperative, then it was that Democracy like the polar star of the night, cast its benign radiance upon the darkness of the prospect, directing the people in the maintenance of the right, and lit them through, to the eventful period of the revolution. to the achievement of an independence, which has ever since been respected by all nations of the earth.

Democracy and popular, freedom are synonimous. Its powerful arm beats back from our shores the paid hirelings of despetism. It raised its magic scentre over prople struggling to be free, and said to the encroaching waves of royalty and power, "thus far shalt thou come, but no farther." It seized the sword of equal rights, and went forth to battle, and vic- A. Minkler, aged 19 years, 3 ino. and 23 The good Democracy then accomplished for our young and growing nationwas of such a character as could not fail to be immortal. The principles it evoked and established were destined to be a panseed for political evils of various kinds, and nobly has it performed its mission .---Whenever sectionalism has attempted to hit its Briarius arm to sever the ties of amity and fraternity, which bind us together in our great confederation, the De- EDWIN, youngest son of Otis and Sybil moeracy have quickly shown their colors in the strife, and waged successful contest with the raging clements. Personating n itself the great principles of popular sovereignty and human progress, it has had the inherent vitality to become the guardian of our institutions, and the sole custodian of our liberties. Factions have prung up in opposition to the Constituin, and strutted their brief hour upon o political stage; but Democracy, and he party which represents it, true and athful to their mission, have religiously uarded that sacred instrument from des-
