heart and strong right arm were ready to protect the helpless, and Johtee, fawning with obsequious grin, would try to attract the tiny creatures he had just repelled.—The spiteful mischief of the ape, the sinuous, gliding motion of the snake, and the ferocious appetites of the tiger, where their indulgence appeared secure, seemed mingled in the fellow's nature. Thinking of Johtee, I have wondered sometimes at the siege of Delhi, but could thoroughly understand the horrors of the Indian mutiny.

In my present frame of mind, however, the sight of the Hindu was welcome.—Two bribes he found it impossible to resist—his fingers always closed with an instinctive clutch on gold, and he could never withstand the temptation of a glass of brandy-pawnee or grog. From him, therefore, I knew I could obtain valuable information as to the colonel's proceedings at the Ferns; perhaps I might even persuade him to convey a note to Letty. Telling the Hindu to follow, I went straight to the bar of a country inn upon the Bayfield road, and administered a strong dose of the liquid bribe. It proved only too effectual. His weak head was unable to bear the liquor, and although I gained the intelligence I desired, I saw it would be too incautious to entrust him with anything which, in his intoxication, he might easily betray.

The same evening, shortly after dusk, I set out to reconnoitre the enemy's position, for you may easily suppose I was not to be deterred by Col. Stark's threats from attempting to gain an interview with Letty. I walked slowly down the road, and it was dark when I passed the swing gate on the path leading to the Ferns.—Treading very gingerly—partly from professional caution, partly from dread of man-traps—I approached the house.—Lights shone from the dining-room windows, lights streamed from the casements of the servants' offices. Cautiously I stepped up to the dining-room, and breathing upon the rime-clothed panes, peeped in.

The enemy was seated at the table, alone, over his wine, big and burly. Behind his master's chair stood the Hindu with folded arms, his dark features glistening over his white robes and beneath his gaudy turban, the light falling upon the yellows of his gleaming eyes. Something had evidently put the colonel in high good humor; perhaps he felt pleasantly replete with dinner; perhaps he was meditating upon the success with which he had that morning repelled my uncle.—Whatever the cause, he laughed aloud, and called to Johtee to bring him the big bamboo.

The Hindu glided to the corner where this instrument was usually kept, raised it reverentially between his palms, and laid it, with a low salam, before his master.—The colonel took the bamboo, poised it like a sceptre in one hand, and ordered his slave before him.

"Now, Johtee, you see this?" said the colonel.

"Iss, Sahib."

"You know what I keep it for, eh, boy?"

"Iss, Sahib."

"Well, then, now listen to me. If ever you come home drunk again, Johtee, as you did this morning, or carry any messages, Johtee or letters, Johtee except for me, or break any rules and regulations of this garrison, Johtee, do you know what'll happen to you, you scoundrel, he?"

"N-n-n-no, Sahib," stuttered the trembling wretch.

"Wy, I'll flog you within half an inch of your life first, then clap you in jail for five years, and then have you blown from a gun afterward. D'ye hear, ye rascal?" roared the colonel, as he brought down the big bamboo upon the table with a rap that made the decanters reel.

"Iss, Sahib," stammered affrighted Johtee, with a lower salam than ever, as he received back the instrument of torture, and reconveyed it humbly to its appointed place.

Leaving the colonel to the magnanimous amusement of practising upon the wretch's fears, I slid on tiptoe around to the servants' offices, and looked in at the kitchen windows. The prospect here was not more promising than in the dining-room. The evening being cold, the servants were gathered about the fire in a group. How was I to gain speech of one of them alone? Fortune here stood my friend. The man I desired to speak with was the gardner. Letty was fond of flowers; she must be often in the greenhouses and garden; this man would have frequent opportunities of conveying a note. As I was thinking how to get hold of him, the man rose grumbling that he must go out in the cold to look after his fire. He lighted a lantern, opened the door, and stepped into the garden—I followed. When he was a little distance from the house, I called him in a low voice. The man turned, held up his lantern, saw my figure looming large through the darkness advancing towards him, was seized with sudden panic, and fled with a shout back to the house.

"Thieves—thieves! murder! robbery!" yelled the gardener, as he burst into the kitchen, arousing a chorus of shrill screams from the terrified women. Anathematising his cowardice, I beat a hasty retreat, and retiring behind the shelter of a friendly bush, awaited what should follow. To the voices of the frightened women were speedily added the gruff tones of Colonel Stark, calling to Johtee to bring his pistols, and inquiring why they were making all this hubbub. Gazing from my concealment I saw the enemy's portly frame blocking up the doorway, while the women peeped timidly from under the shadow of his wing. Next moment he rapidly fired a couple of barrels right and left, one ball singing closely enough over my head to enable me to realize being under fire.

"What savages these old soldiers are!" was my involuntary exclamation, as I crouched closer than ever to the ground, and wished my protecting bush of twice its size. The house was now thoroughly alarmed, and further attempts at exploration useless. As noiselessly as possible, I regained the high road, and made the best of my way back to Bayfield.

Next morning I received the following characteristic note from Col. Stark:

"Young Parchment.—My house was disturbed last night. The ass of a gardener, whom I've just sent about his business, says, by thieves; but it's my belief that you were the culprit. Now, mark this; I've just sent up to town for a couple of the fiercest bull-dogs that can be bought for money. They will be here to-morrow. Look out, therefore, for the safety of the professional hide.

"Letty knows I'm writing, and sends word she has nothing to say to you.

"Truly yours, Josiah Stark."

This was atrocious. I ground my teeth as I handed the epistle to my uncle, who perused it with a smile.

"Upon the whole, Caleb, not unpromising, I think," he said, as he returned the billet. "It is something to have made the enemy speak. Now, keep quiet for a little, and let us watch the effect."

Well, I took my uncle's advice, and restrained my ardour, though Heaven knows it was a difficult task. I went about my ordinary duties, made no attempt to communicate with Letty, behaved as if there were no such tormenting little person in the world, for full a month; then alas by my uncle's advice, I recommenced hostilities in a clumsey way, however, and by channels sure to be detected, if the colonel exercised ordinary sharpness. I bribed the laundress to smuggle in a note with the house-linen, talking to the woman by one of the servants at the Ferns. Next day, the colonel came down to the office in high glee, and with quite a polite air handed me my note, remarking he should be sorry to detain any property upon which I possibly set a value. Similar measures were met in the like manner, until at last sagacious Colonel Stark, convinced of the utter futility of any efforts of mine to break his blockade, and strong in the conviction of his excessive cleverness, came forward with a proposal which, at a given period, should terminate the strife.

"Uncle not in, young Pounce?" said the colonel, swinging one morning into our office with an easy air. "No matter. It's you I want to speak to principally. Now, just listen to me. For the last six weeks you've been trying your utmost, in one way or another, to communicate with my daughter Letty behind my back. Letty's a good girl, and I don't believe she would have anything to say to you against my wish. However, that's not the question. The plain state of the case is this: you say you love Lettey, and want to get her. I say I've got her, and I mean to keep her. Now, it's quite evident we can't go on playing hide-and-seek like this forever; either you must give in, yield and chain, and shake hands amicable, or I must carry Letty away somewhere to town, or abroad, or even back to India where you can't follow. Hey, what do you say to that; youngster?"

I could only reply that, much as I should regret to be the cause of Colonel Stark and his daughter, even temporarily, leaving the Ferns, I could not consent, in fairness to the lady, to give up the hold she had assured me I possessed upon her heart, even at her own desire.

"Very good. That's as much as to say you won't give her up. Now, look here. I've come to propose an arrangement.—You have plenty of assurance, I know, and no doubt fancy you will ultimately win the day. I have a fair share of experience in strategy, and I don't think you can. Let us put the matter to the last. Try you, for the space of six months to take me in, deceive me, clearly, plainly, in my own house, under my own nose, if you like, so palpably that there shall be no mistake about the matter. If you succeed, I'll surrender Letty. If, on the contary, you fail to hoodwink me within those six months, you shall give me your word and honor, even a lawyer's got some, I suppose, to draw off your forces and raise the siege. You shall relinquish all right, claim, title, and all the rest of your jargon, to take advantage of any promise my girl may have given you, and leave her free and unmolested to marry or not to marry as she and I may settle. Now, there's a fair, straightforward proposal, and I'll give you ten minutes to think about it."

The colonel placed his watch before him upon the table, took up the Times, and plunged into a leader.

My uncle luckily coming in at this moment, I laid Colonel Stark's proposition before him, and requested his advice. When the appointed time had expired, the colonel emerged from the newspaper.

"Well, youngster, what's the decision?" he inquired.

"Colonel, I accept."

The conditions of this curious compact were speedily reduced to writing. The document was signed, sealed and delivered. A duplicate was prepared for me; the original was handed to the colonel, who buttoned it with a chuckle secured inside his breast pocket, asked if he should give my love to Letty, and with this Parthian shaft departed on his way.

You see, Col. Stark had such profound reliance upon his own sharpsightedness, and felt so thoroughly convicted that he must win

THE GREAT AMERICAN Tea Company,

51 Vesey street, New York,

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

WHOLESALING TEAS IN THIS COUNTRY.

They have introduced their selection of TEAS, and are selling them at not over

TWO CENTS PER LB. ABOVE COST.

ANOTHER peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea-Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their Teas as to quality, value, and peculiar localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea buyer has in this establishment over all others.

He is no judge of Tea, or the Market, if his time is valuable, he has all the advantage of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all Tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas, and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the Teas are warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company's Teas, which will be sent to all who order it, comprising of every description, colored and uncolored.

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin, Ooolong, Souchong, Orange, Hyson Pekoe, & Japan Tea

This list has each kind of Tea divided into four Classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest—that every one may unders and from description and the price annexed, that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over TWO CENTS (2 cts.) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying enormous profits.

No. 2½	do	6 00
No. 3. Small	do	5 50
No. 8. Large Hotel	do	14 00
No. 18. Medium Laundry,	(to run by steam)	18 00
No. 22. Large	do or hand,	20 00

Nos. 2½ and 3 have no Cogs. All others are warranted. No. 8 is the size generally used in private families.

Orange Judd, of the "American Agriculturist," says of the UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER:

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a clothes saver! A time saver! and strength saver! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost.—We think the machine much more than pays for itself every year in the saving of garments! There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft.—Our own is one of the first make, and it is as good as new after nearly four years' constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is warranted in every particular. No Wringer can be durable without cog wheels.

A good Canvasser wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.
