Sheriff's Sales.—Members of the bar, and others controlling writs authorizing the sale of real estate by the Sheriff of the county, can, by an act of Assembly, direct by an endorsement on the precept for the writ, in which two papers said sale shall be printed. This paper has a circulation several times larger than one of the sheets which has, for the past two years, printed the sales.

Important to Aged or Infirm Parents.—The following decisions just received by me from the Provost Marshal General, are published for the information of the public: Circular No. 61.—"In the case of aged or infirm parents, having two or more sons subject to military duty, election of the son to be exempted must be made before the draft, and his name should not then appear in the draft box."

"In the case of aged or infirm parents having two sons subject to military duty, the father, or if he be dead, the mother, may elect which of them shall be exempt. The right to this exemption does not rest upon the parents dependence on the labor of their sons for support. The law does not contemplate any such dependence." JAMES B. FAY, Provost Marshal General.

The above circular may be seen at my office, OVER THE POST-OFFICE, Montrose. Those who have neglected to secure their rights under the law as above construed, may still do so at any time before the next draft. FRANKLIN FRASER, Montrose, Pa. Oct. 24, 1863.

Wood Wanted.—Any of our subscribers who intend paying their subscriptions in wood will please bring a load of dry immediately. Gen. Rosecrans, Crittenden, and McCook have been removed. "Rosy," as his soldiers called him, sometime ago said something about fighting only for the Union and the Constitution; hence his removal. Like McClellan, he was the idol of the men who fought under him; but he was not "nigger" enough for Lincoln, Halleck, Stanton & Co. Rosecrans has ever since the war commenced been considered a good General.

It seems to be accorded by the universal consent of mankind that Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.'s Sarsaparilla, Pectoral and Pills are the greatest remedies yet discovered for the treatment of disease; that Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the great Elixir of Life, which Philosophers have sought for purifying the blood. Try it and judge for yourselves. The cordial greeting extended to Gen. Rosecrans on his arrival at Cincinnati, and the angry comments of the W. eastern papers, indicate that the Administration has at last done an unpopular thing in relieving him of his command, and the dissatisfaction created by his removal has been very much aggravated by the infamous assaults of the official organs of the War Department.

The Right Kind of Education for Young Men and Boys.

Important to those who can devote a few weeks or months to study; to parents who have sons to educate; and to all wishing to engage in active, successful business, or desiring situations as Book-keepers, Accountants, Salesmen or agents. Eastman's State and National Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on the Hudson river; a Model Commercial College; founded on the great motto of Agesilaus, king of Sparta—"teach your boys; that which they will practice when they become men."

Holding this truth to be self-evident—the more interesting and practical the instruction, the nearer to perfection the teaching.

Prosperity of the Institution and eminent success of the Original, and pre-eminent mode of instruction, combining Theory and Practice.

This Institution entered upon its tenth year in September, and every department is conducted with renewed energy and ability. The attendance is large—greatly exceeding any former year, and additions and improvements have been made, increasing the interest, and giving the greatest possible advantage to the student.

The large patronage it has enjoyed (particularly from the west,) during the summer, and the increase since the close of the harvest is flattering to the friends of the Institution; and unmistakable evidence of the increasing popularity of the College, as its practicability becomes known.

More than a thousand students have graduated here during the past year, and with harness on they have taken their places in the business community, full of confidence, with bright prospects before them. Every city in the east, north, west and south, claims some of the number, and even California, Central America and Europe have felt their energetic action. In this progressive age no man who reflects upon the widely extended and expanding commercial relations and transactions of our country, and upon the incalculable interests involved, can but be deeply impressed with the great importance of a specific, thorough and scientific training for the great sphere of human action.

Never in the history of any country has there been such avenues and opportunities for the young to advance and succeed as at the present moment. Every avenue to distinction and wealth is open. Encouragement and facilities are on every hand.

In a little time the war will seem but a feverish dream of the past, and we shall rejoice in the peace and unbounded prosperity in store for us. The coming years will be ones of great prosperity to our country. Already the skies are brightening; and the harvest has never been more abundant, and the rebellion is upon the point of exhaustion and dissolution.

In view of this, and the hour of our deliverance, we urge the importance of a practical business education for the masses, for in this age of the world only educated labor is sure of success. That the nation grows more practical as it grows in prosperity is seen and acknowledged; and that it requires men practically educated—educated for business and the times—to meet its demands, is apparent to every observer of human nature. Henry Clay was never more truthful than when he said: "Young men, qualify yourself for business. The professions are full, and the age demands it.—Educate yourself for business—a business man for the farm, counting-room, and commercial pursuits—and you will succeed now and hereafter."

This School of business now so widely known and patronized, has continued to grow in favor until it is now second to no other College of learning in this country in point of usefulness and prosperity. It has ever ranked as the first business School in the Union; and that its practical plan of operation has placed it far in advance of all Commercial or Mercantile Colleges in the world an examination will prove.

The system of practical instruction is founded on principles so simple and self-evident, that a personal examination of the institution, in all its appointments, is sufficient to thoroughly demonstrate the practicability of the system.

The copyright has been awarded by law to this College for all Books, Bills, and Manuscripts used in combining Practice with Theory by regular legitimate Office and Banking Business operations. An examination of this system of useful and most proper education is solicited from young men, parents and guardians who have boys to educate, and men of middle age, who desire to engage in active, successful business.

LETTERS AND REPORTS, From eminent Gentlemen indorsing the Course of Study and Practical Plan of Operation, extracted from papers and pamphlets published by the College.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT by Geo. W. Bungay, of the New York Tribune, author of "Crayon Sketches." (From a published letter): The city of Poughkeepsie is noted far and near for the purity of its atmosphere, the richness of its soil, the abundance of its natural resources, and the wealth, enterprise, and intelligence of its inhabitants. In a word, it is a paradise of a place—a city of rural palaces and temples of learning. It is situated on the beautiful banks of the Hudson, and is justly celebrated for the weird and picturesque grandeur of its river and mountain scenery, the classic reminiscences of its revolutionary history, for its famous schools, colleges, and ladies' seminaries, and the high character of its citizens.

It would be difficult to find a more desirable place for a residence. It is within six hours' ride of five of the most prominent states of the Union, and is easy of access from all parts of the United States and Canada, by railway and river. The moral tone of society is excellent, and its educational advantages are unsurpassed by any rural city in the state or nation. It is not matter of surprise that such men as Prof. Morse, who taught science to speak the language of lightning, and Benson J. Lossing, the artist and author, and Matthew Vassar, Esq., the benevolent founder of the Female College endowed with $300,000, choose this place for their home.

I visited Poughkeepsie to attend public exercises at Eastman's State and National Business College—and as this excellent institution is one of the most notable features of this pleasant city, I shall give you a short sketch of it, believing that there are many among your readers who will desire to avail themselves of its rare advantages. The College Buildings, two in number, are large edifices, situated on Washington and Vassar streets, with post-office and telegraph communication with each, and sufficiently large to accommodate six hundred students, with the offices, desks, seats, tables and other appointments needed in a first-class Business College.

A glance at the array of gentlemen receiving instruction here is certainly very suggestive. There are representatives from nearly every part of the east, west, north and loyal south, and also from the Canadas, South America, Cuba, and Great Britain, and a more respectable, intelligent body of young men are seldom seen together. I cannot say all that I would in a newspaper letter of the advantages of this institution. It is not expected that all who graduate here will become merchants or bankers; for it is equally essential that farmers, mechanics, and all others should have such knowledge as is imparted. A very interesting and important feature in the course here, is a series of lectures by the most distinguished literary and business men. In conclusion I would suggest that young men who desire to succeed in life, whether they be merchants, farmers, professional men or mechanics, cannot afford to lose the advantages of this school. Parents and guardians should be interested in this system of practical business instruction. Here your boys are taught that which they will use when they become men, and the whole course is taken up in such an interesting manner that the student never fails to apply himself with an energy satisfactory to teacher and parent.

I will add that the student is also taught the graces of polite learning and belles lettres literature, and that the physical and moral welfare of the student are watched over with parental care and solicitude. But I must close by again making the suggestion that the young man who wishes to excel as a merchant, farmer, mechanic, teacher, lawyer, or physician, will find that a short time spent at this institution will be of incalculable advantage through life.

Letter from ELLI H. ROBERTS, Esq., of the Utica Herald. EASTMAN'S STATE AND NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE.—In the beautiful city of Poughkeepsie, on the Hudson river, has grown up an institution, so admirable in plan and purpose, and so potent in its educational influence upon the country, that it has become not only the pride of the State, but probably the most perfect model of its kind to be found in this or any other country. We refer, of course, to Eastman's Business College. Prof. Eastman, the founder, has devoted years to the work of perfecting his system, which is original with him, and is believed by him, and the many friends of the institution, to combine theory and practice in the best way calculated to develop the business capacity of young men and prepare them for active life. The great success of the institution, and the distinguished patronage it receives from all parts of the country, as well as from other countries, is sufficiently strong evidence in its favor. It is now in the full tide of prosperity, and Prof. Eastman is reaping the full reward of his genius and efforts. Among the several hundred in attendance, we are glad to know that Utica and Oneida county are well represented; and we feel that we cannot too strongly recommend the advantages of the institution to others of our citizens who have sons to educate. All classes of business men are in daily need of the instruction which it furnishes—farmers and mechanics as well as others. It has been unfortunate for our young men that this fact has been so much overlooked, and the business education, so essential both to success and to a proper appreciation of our social system, so generally neglected. To effect the needed reform, no man is working so effectively as Prof. Eastman, through the great Business College which he represents.

We would call the special attention of discharged soldiers to the opportunities which the College affords to them. Deprived, many of them, by their disabilities, of the pleasures and profits of physical pursuits, they may nevertheless here fit themselves for profitable openings, adapted to their bodily condition. The facilities possessed by the College for procuring business positions for young men after graduating, are rendered as perfect as possible by agencies which it has established for that purpose in the larger cities; and clerks, book-keepers, &c. are to be found in all parts of the country, who are indebted to the College and its agencies. Stewart, the great merchant prince of New York, manifests a decided partiality for the graduates of the College, by employing a large number of them, which again is a most valuable endorsement of Prof. Eastman's system and institution, since Stewart, notoriously employs only persons of accomplished business talent. Letter from M. VASSAR, Esq., President of Vassar Female College, Poughkeepsie, January 1864. H. G. EASTMAN, Esq.—Dear Sir: Having visited your School of Business during the past two years, with great pleasure and satisfaction, and coming in contact at home and abroad, with students who had finished the course of instruction from their expressed satisfaction, and my own observation of your plan of practical instruction, I would recommend any young man who is desirous of preparing himself for the active duties of life—such as Mercantile, Commercial, Manufacturing, Banking, or agricultural, wherein the upright, honest, industrious man is engaged—to place himself under your instruction, and thus reap the advantage which your institution possesses.

Yours, M. VASSAR, JR. I have read the above, and fully concur in the recommendation. Yours, M. VASSAR. Letter from the Mayor of Poughkeepsie, July 1st, 1863. H. G. EASTMAN, Esq.—Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in indorsing Mr. Burritt's letter; and as my son has received the benefits of your institution, I at the same time cheerfully recommend its superior advantages and your practical mode of instruction to those who have sons to educate. JAMES BOWNE, Mayor of Poughkeepsie.

MERITS OF THE EASTMAN SYSTEM OF BUSINESS TRAINING. IMITATIONS OF HIS PLAN OF OPERATIONS—COMBINING THEORY AND PRACTICE. A COMMERCIAL COLLEGE IN FACT. Extract from a Published Report by School Commissioner Whittlesey, of New York. As we are all interested in any enterprise that is calculated to do good to the rising generation, and especially in the Educational Institutions of our land, I take pleasure in making honorable mention of Eastman's National Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and of annexing the following brief report of my observations there: It is very truly said that "the more interesting and practical the instruction, the nearer to perfection the teaching," and it seems that Prof. Eastman has noted upon this wise principle in perfecting his excellent system of instruction, combining Theory and Practice.

It is clear to every observer that our general system of education is wanting in that practical character which prepares a person directly in the useful arts for the active, responsible duties of life, and any person who improves upon this system is a public benefactor. Where there is real merit, it is right and honorable that it should be known that it may be appreciated. In business affairs the difficulty has always been that the Commercial Education usually obtained by our young men has not been practical enough. The Commercial Colleges in the different cities have done a good work in this matter, but still in this branch of education, as in all others, some one must take the lead—some institution must come out in advance of all others. Such is the Poughkeepsie College. It is really the fountain, the head of all other Commercial or Mercantile Colleges in this country, and while in Law, Medicine and Divinity we have a Leader, so in Commercial Science Prof. Eastman stands at the head as educator of young men for business.

I have had occasion to visit many of the Commercial Colleges of the country during the last year, and while I acknowledge the merits of several of them, I can say I was astonished at the superiority this institution presents over others, and the extended facilities it offers for a practical, useful education. I found here a GREAT Business College, great in everything that goes to make up a successful American institution. More than four hundred young men were in attendance, and in this I saw one of the great features of the school. How excellent the association of so many noble, energetic young men brought together from every section of our country, and how infinitely greater the advantages where so many are associated together for business. I had before supposed that which I now see a necessity in successfully conducting Mr. Eastman's system, was an objection. I find it absolutely necessary to have daily attendance of at least 300 students, to give each Office, Bank, and Department its proper officers, clerks, book-keepers, and assistants, engaged in every kind of bargain and sale, and conducting the operations of so many mercantile houses. The interest and improvement of the young men must be apparent.

The College proper occupies two large buildings used for business purposes, also a lecture hall, with a corps of 19 professors. As I have before remarked, the great feature of the institution is the system of instruction, combining Theory and Practice, which is original with Mr. Eastman, and which has cost him years of study to develop and perfect. One building is devoted exclusively to actual business purposes, and the whole appearance of this establishment enchants the eye and suggests a business world in miniature. In each bank (with counters and fixtures as fine and large as a regular chartered city institution,) I counted fifteen officers and clerks busy with the business. In the Union Store and Railroad Offices, as many more, while the Exchange Office, Post Office, Insurance Office, Custom House and Broker's Office, and other departments, had their full representations. The Telegraph Office are furnished with three instruments each, batteries and machinery complete, and a regular teacher is employed. To give all these Offices their business, two hundred mechanics are engaged in bargain and sale in the main department. Such is this Model College. Already imitations of Mr. Eastman's system have sprung up in different cities, and schools claim to have introduced it, but believe me, if they ever intend to do it all, it will be many years before they can adopt it to any success. An examination of other institutions and then a comparison with this will prove the truth of my assertion. The College enjoys the patronage and confidence of a large class of our eminent merchants and literary men: I was introduced to two nephews of Hon. Wm. H. Seward, a son of Judge Corning and two sons of Hon. Wm. H. Dodge, of Michigan; of the journals in New York the Tribune has one young man there, Frank Leslie, of the Illustrated Newspaper, a son, and also the editor of the Albion, besides several others. I will now give you a brief synopsis of the studies and plan of conducting the institution; believing there are many among your readers who will sooner or later become its patrons.

The following letter is important to those who desire situations after graduation. Tribune Office, New York City, Aug. 16th, 1863. H. G. Eastman, Esq.—Dear Sir—Since my lectures here from the College, I have had frequent calls from your graduates, and when they bear your endorsement, I am very happy to recommend them to business houses here. I am gratified that they so readily find honorable and lucrative employment. You will do well to impress upon the minds of your students that practically educated young men of the right stamp, are in greater demand than ever. That so many have enlisted and business is so brisk in every quarter, that there is a chance for all. Yours, very truly, GEO. W. BUNGAY.

Special attention is invited to the important features set forth in papers and pamphlets published by the College, for which the Institution claims superiority and great merit. The whole expense in completing the prescribed business course is from $30 to $300. The time usually required to complete this course is from ten to sixteen weeks. This prescribed course of study is arranged especially for that large class of persons, both young men and boys, and men of middle age, who desire to be qualified in the shortest possible time, and at the least expense, to fill successfully positions as book-keepers and accountants, or in active business of any kind. Boys under the age of 18, can devote a much longer time to the studies to great advantage. There is a separate department in the Vassar street College for this class, and their drill in the English branches is thorough and practical. The College affords special opportunities to returned disabled soldiers. BUSINESS POSITIONS AND SITUATIONS furnished those desirous of employment on completion of the Course, through the College Agencies, established in the Large Cities for that purpose. The College Paper contains numerous Letters from Graduates in Business in different parts of the country. Among the number are six in Stewart's Stores, Broadway, New York.

FULL information of this Institution, view of buildings, offices, banks, and different departments for actual business, may be found in the College Paper of eight pages, which will be mailed free of charge to any address, on application. It also contains the fullest indorsement in Letters and Reports, by the Hon. E. Burritt, (Learned Blacksmith,) Judge M. Farlan, of Massachusetts, Geo. W. Bungay, of the New York Tribune, the Hon. E. D. Whittlesey, Superintendent of Schools, Matthew Vassar, Esq., Founder of Vassar Female College, the Rev. J. Ives, the Rev. J. Cayler, the Clergy and Mayor of Poughkeepsie, and other eminent Business and Literary Men. Address H. G. EASTMAN, Pres't Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

NOTE. The following note is taken from the College Paper: NOTE.—We solicit the names and Post Office address of young men, teachers and others, in different parts of the country, who will probably be interested in this system of practical instruction, or who may desire the College Paper or our published work; and as a remuneration to those who will favor us with such a list of their acquaintances, we offer to mail them, free of charge, on receipt of such list, our PERPETUAL ALMANAC GOOD FOR 40 YEARS, arranged in entirely new and novel manner, suitable for framing, for libraries, private rooms, or hanging in places of business. It also gives the stamp duties on various bills and papers in general use. To Musicians. As it is desired to sustain and encourage the INSTRUMENTAL BAND of the College, composed of students, which furnish Music for Lectures and Literary Entertainments before the Institution, he will, after the first of September, admit, free of charge, a certain number of good musicians who have played in bands, and will play with the College Band on such occasions as are mentioned above. They will address the President of the Institution, stating their qualifications, and if accepted, a scholarship will be presented them. Thousands voted for Curtin because they were told it would help end the war and save another draft. Now they are they were cheated. Curtin is elected and a draft follows.
