on which he was to take the command of his vessel and set sail.

Until now he had intrusted the good little ship to the master, who had made several little successful adventures.—Matthew had his ship all refitted and repainted, he changed its name from The Vulture to the dear name of Rose, and had a fine figure-head of that flower somewhat of the cabbage order, made as a special ornament for his ship.

His wife and boy he left in a quiet, comfortable cottage he had bought, and there was money enough in the old sea-chest in his room to last for over two years, and he should be back long before that time.

And so he sailed. The parting was so dreadful that the good captain took a solemn vow as he stood on the deck of his ship, that this should be his last venture, that he would bring back enough and then never leave his happy home again.

Now he is gone; Rose, with straining eyes can no longer see that vessel, even as a black speck; the captain has long since lost sight of the white handkerchief his darling waved. Rose and her boy have gone home, and the young mother kneels alone in her chamber, praying for his safety, praying for courage to endure his absence.

So passed the first year in peace and resignation; then she received a letter from him: in six months he would be home. Rose was happy. What were six months?—nothing. She endured a whole year separation.

But six months went by, then a year, then two; no tidings, neither of the ship, nor of the captain. His boy grew, and had learned to pray for his father; Rose had grown pale and grave. In the third year her mother died; then was Rose indeed alone and hope had fled. So passed by eight years of her life. She was now twenty-eight. No longer did she watch and wait; she knew the sea had devoured its prey, and she had mourned him long and deeply, as those widowed in heart and not in name, mourn.

Life, however, was difficult to Rose.—She was forced now to work for her subsistence. All she possessed was the cottage, and that no privation could induce her to part with. The widow, however, had found friends, among them a man well to do in the world, the owner of many vessels, and possessed of a fine, handsome home, the handsomest in the village of N——. At last he ventured to make known the nature of his feelings to Rose. He offered her his hand. Rose shrunk away, but her life was very solitary and her boy without a protector; she herself helpless.

In the eighth year of her widowhood Rose married again.

After three years' experience Rose confessed even to herself that she was contented and happy. She had two children besides her own boy, as she always called Mat the son of her first love. She was one evening on the porch of her house, one child playing at her knee, the other on her lap, (for it was a mere infant,) when a man bent and lame, clothed in rags, came across the garden and stood looking towards her.

"Mother," said Matthew, her eldest son, "see, that is a beggar-man, and he looks like a sailor."

"Ah! a sailor must never go empty handed from our door, give him this."

Matthew flew with his alms toward the beggar. He had a look of age and suffering about him that enlisted the boy's sympathy at once.

"Take this," said he, "mother never lets a sailor go away without relief. My father was a sailor."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, Matthew Carroll, captain of the Rose, lost at sea. Did you ever hear of him?"

"No; and you are his son."

"Yes, mother says he was a brave, good man."

"She is rich now—all this belongs to her, does it not?"

"Oh, yes, we are rich now; mother married again. Those are my little brothers, and yonder comes my new father. He has just given me a fine boat. Oh! he is so kind to me. Good bye, sailor."

For an instant the sailor stood, and, shading his eyes with his hand, gazing first at the boy, then at the mother, sitting under that vine-clad porch, smiling at the infant on her knee. Then the sailor turned away, hobbled down the walk, and was seen no more. Neither Rose nor Mat ever remembered his having been there, five minutes after he had disappeared.

Five years after this there came a letter for Rose from a lawyer in New York. A man named Matthew Carroll had left her the whole of his fortune; besides a sealed letter which he forwarded.

"Rose, darling, I was not dead. For eight years I was on an Island among savages. I came back. I found you happy, another by your side; children, not mine, around you. You, so fair, young, and gentle still. Oh! how I gazed on you for those few moments! What could I bring to you? Not even my money, for you were rich. I could bring you but remorse, sorrow, and disgrace. I could bring you but an old husband, changed and suffering. You had mourned me as dead—I knew you had. Not one bitter feeling had I toward you. One look at you and my boy, and then away forever. The only proof of love I could give you, was to leave you at peace, and to remain dead to you and all the world thought me. I have never been back to my home, and I die among strangers, blessing you and my boys. Farewell, my own sweet, darling wife. Be happy, and my spirit that watches you will rejoice."

The fortune, over fifty thousand dollars, was bequeathed to Rose, Danvers, to be equally divided between all her children, making no especial clause for Matthew Carroll; "for," said the will, "Rose loves them all alike."

The peculiar taint of infection which we call Scurvy is the consumption of millions of men. It either produces, or is produced by an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and leaves the system, to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous consumption is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz., purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous diseases leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the direction for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus leaves its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal result than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. By its aid we may prevent, as well as cure the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out the foul humors that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distemper which lurk within the system or burst out on any part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues have been proven by abundant trial, and there remains no question of its surpassing excellence for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any other which has been before the people, and is far more effectual than any other which has ever been available to them.

No. 8.	Large Hotel do	14 00

Nos. 2½ and 3 have no Cogs. All others are warranted. No. 2 is the size generally used in private families.

Orange Judd, of the "American Agriculturist," says of the UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER:

"A child can readily wring out a bushell of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a clothes saver! A time saver! and strength saver! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost.—We think the machine much more than pays for itself every year in the saving of garments! There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft.—Ourown is one of the first make, and it is as good as new after nearly four years' constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog-Wheels is warranted in every particular. No Wringer can be durable without cog-wheels.

A good Canvasser wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

From Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, from distrust of their ingredients and effects, yet know of no sufficient reasons why a man may not testify to the benefits he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this the more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture. I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, Esq., for the removal of this prejudice by proper tests, and for encouragement to try them, when suffering from great and long continued debility. The use of 3 bottles of these bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief, and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for 6 months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them. J. NEWTON BROWN.

ATTENTION, SOLDIERS!

And the Friends of Soldiers.

We call the attention of all having relations or friends in the army to the fact that "HOOFLAND'S German Bitters" will cure nine-tenths of the diseases induced by exposures and privations incident to camp life. In the lists, published almost daily in the newspapers, on arrival of the sick, it will be noticed that a very large portion are suffering from debility. Every case of that kind can be readily cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. Diseases resulting from disorders of the digestive organs are speedily removed. We have no hesitation in saying that if these Bitters were freely used among our soldiers, hundreds of lives might be saved that otherwise will be lost.

We call attention to the following remarkable and well authenticated cure of one of the nation's heroes, whose life, to use his own language, "has been saved by the Bitters:"

PHILADELPHIA, August 23d, 1863.

Messrs. Jones & Evans:—Well, gentlemen, your Hoofland's German Bitters has saved my life. There is no mistake in this. It is vouched for by numbers of my comrades, some of whose names are appended, and who were cognizant of all the circumstances of my case. I am, and have been, for the last four years, a member of Sherman's celebrated battery, and under the immediate command of Captain R. B. Ayres. Through the exposure attendant upon my arduous duties, I was attacked in Nov. last, with inflammation of the lungs, and was for 72 days in the hospital. This was followed by great debility, heightened by an attack of dysentery. I was then removed from the White House, and sent to this city on board the Steamer "State of Maine," where I landed on the 28th of June. Since that time I have been about as low as any one could be and still retain a spark of vitality. For a week or more I was scarcely able to swallow anything, and if I did force a morsel down, it was immediately thrown up again.

I could not even keep a glass of water on my stomach. Life could not last under these circumstances; and, accordingly, the physicians who had been working faithfully, though unsuccessfully, to rescue me from the grasp of the dread archer, frankly told me they could do no more for me, and advised me to see a clergyman, and to make such disposition of my limited funds as best suited me. An acquaintance who visited me at the hospital, Mr. Frederick Steinborn, of 6th below Arch street, advised me, as a forlorn hope, to try your Bitters, and kindly presented a bottle. From the time I commenced taking them the gloomy shadow of death receded, and I am now thank God for it, getting better. Though I have taken but two bottles, I have gained ten pounds, and feel sanguine of being permitted to rejoin my wife and daughter, from whom I have heard nothing for 18 months; for gentlemen, I am a loyal Virginian, from vicinity of Front Royal. To your invaluable Bitters I owe the certainty of life which has taken the place of vague fears—to your Bitters will I owe the glorious privilege of again clasping to my bosom those who are dearest to me in life.

Very truly yours, ISAAC MALONE.

We fully concur in the above statement, as we had despaired of seeing our comrade, Mr. Malone, restored to health.
