MOST PAIL FEED FOR COWS.

It's of no use to think of keeping up the quantity and quality of our butter, if we neglect the full feeding of our cows.

When the grass has been bitten by the frost several times, it loses its sweetness and its substance. There may be enough in bulk, but the animals do not like it as well, and it does not make our milk or butter. The pasture food must be gradually supplemented by fodder, and we can well afford to go to the trouble and expense of it, for butter sells at very remunerative prices. Corn stalks do not dry, will generally be eaten up clean, and a few thrown out morning and night are not only relished, but have a direct and marked effect on the milk product. Sweet apples, especially, fed in reasonable quantities, are good; but do not let the cows have the run of the orchard. Pumpkins are first rate, a few at a time, twice a day, with all the seeds removed. Cabbage leaves, beet and turnip, and carrot tops, and such like garden refuse, are excellent. A little dry hay may also be given to advantage, feeding out only what will be eaten up clean. A few pints of bran, or corn meal, or a few ears of soft corn, or some oil meal, should be fed daily. Yet the change from simple pasturage to this extra feed should be made gradually. All acknowledge the importance of this carelessness in spring, when passing from dry feed to grass. There should be similar care exercised in the fall, or the yield of milk will fall off. Cows or sheep that are in good flesh, not to say fat, at the beginning of cold weather are half wintered. Just now it is that feed tells best. The fresh bracing air gives an appetite, the annoyance of heat does not wear of the flesh; animals can feed all night, and the weather is not cold enough to make it necessary to consume much of the food, or the fat, to take up the animal heat.—A. M. Agriculturist.

A STRATEGIC BACON.

We witnessed an amusing incident on one of our suburban streets last Saturday. A fashionable young lady, got up in the highest style of the milliners art, and arrayed in all the glory of a five-dollars-per-yard silk, and twenty dollars' bonnet, and three-hundred dollar shawl, was majestically sweeping along in the direction of the Fair Ground, while just behind, a little boy was leading a fat coon. A countryman in a brown sloshed hat and a lacey woolsey "warmus," came along followed by a "yallah" dog, whose nose was scarred diagonally, transversely, and laterally with the scars of many a fiercely-contested battle with members of the coon family. "Tige" no sooner saw the ring-tailed representative of his ancient enemy than he made a frantic dive for him, accompanied by a furious bark. Cooney comprehended the situation at a glance, bolted incontinently, and sought sanctuary beneath the ample circumference of the lady's crinoline. The young lady screamed while the dog made rapid circles, snuffing the air, and evidently bewildered to know what had become of the coon. The situation of the young lady was critical and embarrassing. She was afraid to move, for fear the coon would bite, and the dog declined to leave his retreat until the dog had retired. Finally the dog was stoned off, the boy dragged the coon from his hiding place, and the young lady went her way, with a lively consciousness of having experienced a new sensation. As for the coon, he was instantly killed. He had seen too much to live.—Indianapolis Jour.

THE VALUE OF A BAR OF IRON.—A bar of iron, originally valued at five dollars, is worth, when worked into horse-shoes, ten dollars and fifty cents; into needles, three hundred and ninety-five dollars; into pen-knife blades, three thousand two hundred and eighty-five dollars; into shirt-buttons, twenty-nine thousand four hundred and eighty dollars; into balance springs for watches, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars! Thirty-one pounds of iron have been made into wire upwards of one hundred and eleven miles in length, and so fine was the fabric that part of it was converted, in lieu of horse-hair, into a barrister's wig!

Tom presented his bill to neighbor Joe for service rendered. The latter looked at it, and expressed much surprise at the amount.

Why Tom strikes me you have made out a pretty round bill here, eh?

"I'm sensible it's a round one, though Tom, and I've come for the purpose of having it squared."

The Highlanders are exceedingly impudent and ungrateful men, says Dr. Guthrie, &c. of the defence of their vires made by a Highland minister, who, giving a notice of his parish in Sir John Fancis's Statistical Account of Scotland, and being required to state its moral condition, said, with matchless impudence and impertinence, "The people of this parish are very brave, therefore they are always fighting. They are very hospitable, therefore they are always given to drink. They are very polite, therefore they are in the habit of telling lies."

Terrible consternation was created in the Milwaukee depot, a few days ago, by a soldier of a departing regiment kissing a young woman by mistake, believing her to be his wife. She was only apprised upon discovering the martial blunderer was a very handsome whiskerando and that his wife's bonnet was identical in shade and trimming with her own, which had led to the mistake; moreover the girl was not turned on.

General has the use of this remedy, and to popular belief everywhere, that it is necessary to recruit it. It works great for it, and still affords the abundant and voluntary testimony of the many folks from long suffering and settled disease, who have been restored to health again by its use.

THE BOY, Jacob Seeger.

Well known and much respected among the German population of this country, makes the following statement for the benefit of the afflicted:

HARRISON, Pa., Feb. 16, 1859.

Dear Sirs.—Having realized in my daily importations, the value of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry—it afford me pleasure to recommend it to the public. Some eight years ago one of my daughters became to be in a decline and little hope of her recovery was given. Then she had a bottle of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, where she took the whole of the contents of the bottle there was a great improvement in her health. I have, in my individual case, made frequent use of your valuable medicine, and have always been satisfied.
