

The Romance of an Early Engagement.
The following romantic story is told of Lord March, grandson of Charles II., who after said became the second Duke of Richmond, and who, while yet quite young, was engaged without being consulted as to the marriage; to a lady still younger. The bride was Lady Sarah, the daughter of the Earl of Cadogan, Marquis of Monmouth, General. Their union, according to Napier's account, was a bargain to discharge gambling debts between the parents, and the young Lord March was brought from college, the lady from the library, for the ceremony. The bride was naked and silent, but the bridegroom exclaimed, "Surely you are not going to marry me?" "Not that day," she said. Married he was, however, and his tutor instantly carried him off to the continent.

Three years after this event Lord March returned home from his travels most accompanied by a gentleman, but having such a poor, disagreeable, recollection of his wife he avoided home, and repaired on the night of his arrival, to the theatre. There he saw a play, at so fine an appearance that he asked if she was, and on being answered that she was the "reigning queen, the beautiful Lady March," he hastened to claim her, and they lived together so affectionately that one year only after his decease, in 1650, she died of child-birth. One of the numerous children of this loving pair, Lady Sarah, grew up an extraordinary beauty, attracted the attention of George III., who had then ascended the throne, at the age of twenty-two, and her charms made such a deep impression on the heart of the young king that he, no doubt, would have married her had not influence been exerted to prevent it, and he was compelled by State policy to marry the Princess Charlotte, of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who bore him fifteen children, of whom the Duchess of Kent after was the last surviving, and who died in 1857.

The subsequent marriage of Lady Sarah Lennox, to Sir Thomas Charles Burney, Baronet, who was the son of a clergyman, proved that with her ambition went a strong passion. But her married life was an unhappy one, and the marriage was dissolved by an act of Parliament in 1766. She was afterwards married to the Hon. Major General Geo. Napier, and became the mother of a set of most remarkable among whom were the Hon. Sir Charles James Napier, the conqueror of Scinde, and Lieutenant General Sir William Napier, the historian of the Peninsular War. Her ladyship died in 1823, at the advanced age of eighty-two, and was believed to be the last surviving great granddaughter of Charles II.

Lints Addressed to a Friend at Farting.
Farewell, my friend, a long farewell,
How long we part no tongue can tell;
Perhaps while many a year shall end,
Or, yet to never meet again.

If this our fate—if Heaven decrees
That we no more each other see,
Then I must say, farewell my friend,
Till life's short journey here shall end.

Our childhood days, the chains that bind
In friendship to the heart and mind—
I think of now and cannot tell,
A nearer word than is Farewell.

Our dreams of bliss—the happy hours
Have been like Sun's fading flow'r,
As fleet, alas! as life is short,
And the remembrance pains my heart.

Unfeigned thou art, thy brow is fair,
No trace of grief is written there;
My prayer would be twos'd so remain,
But friendship's wish is all in vain.

May you possess a noble mind
Enriched by science truly refined;
May all to you prove true my friend,
And every blessing toward you tend.

And when I'm in my cold clay bed,
And my name numbered with the dead,
Shouldst thou still linger from above,
Wilt thou not sing the song I love?

One more request, and then I breathe,
A last adieu—my heart doth grieve,
And my request, the short it be,
Is this: Will you remember me?

BENJAMIN RUSSELL.
Auburn, October 23d, 1842.

He who waits to do a great deal of good at once will never do anything—it is made up of little things. It is very rarely that an execution is offered for doing a great deal of good at once. True greatness consists in doing great little things. People shake the ocean, and the greatest works are done by little. If we would do good in the world, we must be willing to do good in little things.

—Only 65 persons out of 100 marry; of this 65, three are divorced, eight run away, fourteen live like cats and dogs, thirty are indifferent, and ten are happy.
